3 Shapiros, All Dead.
Ambition Drives.
Abraham Lincoln Said People.
Would Bombs Wake Us?

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE LAST of the New York Shapiro brothers is dead, murdered, as a matter of course. Willie, the last killed and youngest of three brother racketeers, was less able than his two older brothers, and other criminals that considered him a nuisance put him to death ingloriously.

He was beaten with a length of gas pipe, that crushed his skull, broke his arm, and with rope knotted around his throat, his body wrapped in a coarse piece of burlap, was buried alive in the marshes of Jamaica Bay.

WILLIE, just dead, was only twenty-four. He and his two brothers, of whom Meyer was the oldest and family boss, were apparently not able to do their own thinking after "Legs" Diamond, whom they followed, died and left them to think for themselves.

Willie was killed, the police suggest, "for trying to chisel in on good sized dice games in Brooklyn." His older brothers had done this successfully until they were murdered. Willie had been working for his sister, who keeps a pawnshop, and was almost inclined to "turn honest," but started in "for himself" again. Racketeers have one good characteristic—they exterminate each other.

A BRITISH ARMY officer, Captain Wilson, 38 years old, possessed ambition, which overrules all other passions when highly developed. He determined to climb Mt. Everest, alone, except for a few native porters, reached a height of twenty-three thousand feet, six thousand feet below the highest spot upon the earth's surface, and there died of cold and lack of oxygen.

It is too bad he had to fail, but such a death is better than that of an old man, who drops into an unknown grave when friends have forgotten him, and relatives have abandoned him.

EVERY HUMAN BEING has three mainsprings, wound up at birth, that make him "work" as long as he lives. The first, with a great majority the strongest, is the instinct of self-preservation, the desire to continue ALIVE. Nature made that the strongest passion because she wanted us to stay on earth and do whatever we are supposed to do.

Next in force to the instinct of self-preservation, in the majority of human beings, is the family instinct or instinct of reproduction.

LAST OF THE three which drove Captain Wilson to his death is AMBITION that has changed us from cannibalism to caviar, from the cave to the skyscraper, from the ox-cart to the airplane.

When men become really civilized, the three mainsprings will be reversed as regards their power, like an hour-glass turned upside down. Then ambition will come first, the family instinct second, and self-preservation, love of life, last. But that change will not come soon.

BUSINESS IS moving again in San Francisco, where 100,000 strikers have returned to their jobs. A general protest very quickly disposed of a general strike, as it will do wherever such a strike starts in the United States.

Remember Abraham Lincoln said "GOVERNMENT BY THE PEOPLE." He did not mention government by any PRIVATE ORGANIZATION, whether of labor, religion or capital.

MR. BALDWIN, for England, announces an extensive airplane building program that will bring the English air fleet within 210 units of the French fleet.

Somebody in England seems to know that a plane 30,000 feet up, out of reach of anti-aircraft guns, practically out of sight, moving 200 miles an hour, dropping explosives and poison gas, has a considerable advantage over troops on the ground, as an eagle has the advantage over a crouching rabbit. Unlike the eagle, the airplane need not come down to do its work.

Five hundred planes over Washington, dropping war messages, might make even this government take action, only there wouldn't be any government left to act. It would be necessary to elect an entirely new statesman-outfit.

Whether anything less disastrous than five hundred explosive bombs and five hundred poison gas bombs could wake up our capital city, remains to be seen.

The present government motto seems to be:

"BILLIONS FOR ECONOMIC THEORIZING; NOT A DOLLAR FOR INTELLIGENT DEFENSE."

RUSSIAN PURCHASES in the United States have been cut down from ten million to one million dollars a month because of quarreling concerning the Russian debt.

The present government of Russia never borrowed money here that it did not pay. This country through private bankers lent to the ridiculous Kerensky and to the tottering czar when a child half weaned might have known that the debt would not be paid.

We swallow the mild refusal of England and France to pay debts contracted by their now existing governments. Why get excited about the small debt of a former Russian government?

How many Americans realize what Europe's debt to the United States amounts to? This country, through its government and private financiers, lent twenty-six thousand million dollars to Europe, a sum only one thousand million less than the total national debt of the United States.

CITY SIZZLES AS MERCURY NEARS 100

No Relief in Sight; Death Toll in Nation Mounts

Heat, soaring to new records across most of the continent, tightened its stifling grip on Pittsburgh today and held no promise of week-end relief as the mercury rose toward 100 throughout this area.

Before noon, the temperature here had passed 90, 10 degrees hotter than yesterday forenoon and well on the road toward a new record for the day, the old mark —99—standing since 1885.

DEATH TOLL MOUNTS

A death list of more than 100 trailed in the path of the summer's worst heat wave across the nation, Missouri alone attributing 33 deaths to the heat.

Temperatures throughout the Central West ranged above 100, as high as 114 in Mexico, Mo. It was an official 108 in Joliet and other parts of Illinois. Nebraska sweltered under 110 and so did Arkansas.

In Ft. Smith, Ark., public officials, citizens and the clergy joined in a non-denominational prayer meeting, beseeching the heavens for rain.

CATTLE DROP IN TRACKS

Livestock dropped in their tracks in sun-baked pastures. Streams dwindled to tantalizing trickles. In Chicago a ban was put on using hydrants for sprinkling to conserve the water supply.

Crops throughout the farm belt were shriveling under the relentless sun.

In Pittsburgh the temperature stood at 80 at 7 a. m., jumped to 87 by 9, passed 90 at 10 and was steadily rising.

Crowds, seeking a measure of relief, swarmed to public pools and parks and an overflow week-end was expected at all these centers.

3 Fined for Mashing In Squirrel Hill

Three men were fined as mashers today. One was discharged. Those fined were Lawrence F. Furry, 36, 858 Braddock avenue, East Pittsburgh; Charles Kramer, 27 of 1119 South Braddock avenue, and Joseph O'Brien, 21, of 1123 Richmond street.

Magistrate Charles F. Papale assessed each of the three $10. They were arrested in the Squirrel Hill district.

BABY DEATH IN HOSPITAL PROBED

Seek Student Nurse On Complaint Of Mother

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 21.—A young mother today had called on the District Attorney's office to investigate the death of her 18-months-old baby, scalded to death in a bathtub at the Brooklyn Infants' Home last Friday.

As the law went into action, Mrs. Anna Greenberg, 28, told her tragic story, of being notified of the death of her little son, Irwin, of the scant information given her at the home, and of the frantic search for funds for the burial.

George Goldenburg, superintendent of the home, when questioned, told authorities that the baby's death was an accident, and blamed a student nurse, Mrs. Peggy Lusk, 26, who was discharged soon after the baby's death.

A search was at once instituted for Mrs. Lusk, also known by her maiden name of Miss Peggy Lawson, but she could not be located at any of her known addresses.

The mother, deserted by her husband, had placed the baby in the institution a year ago, visiting him frequently there.

NEW YORK, July 21.—(Universal) — Coincidence and the skill of a Brooklyn surgeon saved the life of 14-month-old Bobby Senese yesterday.

The baby was playing in his carriage in front of his home in Brooklyn, when he fell and hung strangling, with a safety strap around his neck. His mother discovered the accident and ran toward a nearby hospital with him. Dr. Mortimer Kopp, a plastic surgeon, heard her cries as he passed the mother in his automobile.

He saw it was a case of more than simple strangulation and took the child into a store. With instruments he was carrying he probed into Bobby's throat and extracted a safety pin. After 10 minutes of artificial respiration the child recovered completely.

CHICAGO, July 21.—(AP.)—A mysterious malady which has taken the lives of eight babies in Chicago's finest hospitals today had claimed the attention of the city's leading physicians.

The extent of the disease was revealed following the death last week of the infant son of John Simpson and grandson of James Simpson, utilities board chairman.

CORBEIL, Ont., July 21.—(AP.)—Radium treatments at some time in the future are planned for Marie, youngest of the Dionne quintuplets, it was revealed as what was heretofore called a birthmark was identified as a naveus type of tumor.

The baby, who now weighs an even three pounds, is suffering no ill effects at present, Dr. A. R. Dafoe said.

Endurance Fliers Seek New Record

MERIDIAN, Miss., July 21.—(AP.)—Al and Fred Key, Meridian Municipal Airport managers, started their second attempt to break the world's endurance flying record yesterday at 6:32 P. M.

The first refueling contact was made shortly before daylight today.

JACKIE COOGAN — TOBY WING

Time surely does fly. It doesn't seem so very long ago that Charlie Chaplin starred in "The Kid," and the kid of the title was Jackie Coogan, just past the toddling stage. Now Jackie is thinking of saying "I do" with one of Hollywood's most vivacious younger players. As a matter of fact, many in Hollywood think that Toby Wing and Jackie are already married. Last night both of them denied a secret wedding in Mexico, but Miss Wing admitted she thought young Coogan "charming." These are International News Photograph Service pictures.

MILK, ICE AND BEER SERVICE BANNED IN LABOR WAR

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, blood-stained by clashes between police and striking truck drivers, was hit today by the threat of a general walkout of all union labor.

Freight trains moved again on the Seattle water front, after Mayor Charles L. Smith led 300 police in a tear gas rout of 2,000 striking maritime workers and their sympathizers who had placed ties on the rails.

Portland's gasoline famine ended when heavy police guards escorted tank trucks from the strike-choked water front to filling stations whose tanks were dry.

The end of San Francisco's general strike brought from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, the comment that the workers "made a grave mistake when they engaged in a sympathetic strike, but they acted wisely when they ordered it officially terminated."

Rally Calls For Ouster Of Mayor

MINNEAPOLIS, July 21.—(AP.)—Striking Minneapolis truck drivers demanded a general strike today after a day of violence in which 68 persons were wounded in a blast of shotguns.

Federal mediators, faced with the ultimatum of the strikers that they would defer peace negotiations until assured they would "not be shot down like dogs," worked feverishly to stem the rising tide of indignation among the truck drivers.

The outbursts of violence, followed by labor's demands for the removal of Chief of Police Michael Johannes and Mayor A. G. Bainbridge, were first attributed by Gov. Floyd B. Olson to a broken truce.

The Governor then appeared at a meeting of the employers' committee and repeated the charge, but when informed they knew nothing of a truce agreement, withdrew it with an apology, a committee representative said.

Yesterday's violence occurred over movement of truck merchandise. The strikers' steering committee announced there would be no deliveries today of milk, ice, or beer.

GENERAL STRIKE MOVE

Miles Dunne, chief leader of the strikers, asked for a general strike. He appealed to all men engaged in the transportation industry here to refuse to "turn a wheel."

National Guardsmen, 3,400 strong, equipped with machine guns and bayonetted rifles, were stationed at strategic points in the city.

Gov. Olson said:

"I am all prepared to take over the military control of the city any time. If it is necessary to assume military control I will make the City of Minneapolis as quiet as a Sunday school. The convoying of trucks represents the breaking of promises made to Father Hass (the Rev. Francis Haas, federal mediator), and me that there would be a truce until Saturday night.

Peace Hopes Grow in Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—(AP.)—Hopes of peace stirred anew along the strike-torn Pacific Coast today—despite martial law threats at Portland and disorders at Seattle—as federal agencies pressed for settlement of the prolonged maritime conflict.

For the first time in two months, trucks driven by union men rolled along the San Francisco waterfront when the last line of a general strike collapsed with the unconditional return to work of teamsters.

Industrial leaders here pledged a policy of co-operation towards organized labor to smooth away bitterness left in the wake of the four-day mass walkout which officially ended Thursday.

At Los Angeles, Hugh Johnson, NRA administrator, declared he believed and prayed the maritime dispute will go before a mediation board appointed by President Roosevelt within 24 hours.

PEACE MEETING SET

The San Francisco local of the International Longshoremen's Association will meet tonight to consider the board's request and an early reply is expected from waterfront employers and shippers.

United States Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, author of federal labor legislation, is co-operating with the President's board here.

Portland was admittedly the danger point to the revived peace hopes. Union leaders, who had promised Senator Wagner to withhold drastic action, talked general strike again while movements of cargo with recruited workers went forward behind police lines and National Guardsmen awaited orders from Gov. Julius L. Meier.

DAKOTANS BACK LANGER'S WIFE

BISMARCK, S. D., July 21.—(AP.)—Political allies of William Langer, deposed Governor, were making a last ditch stand for power today in the face of heavy odds.

They tossed two political bombshells in the turbulent situation with announcements that Mrs. William Langer would assume her husband's place on the fall ballot, in event of his final disqualification, and that investigation of the conviction of the ousted chief executive would start in the House of Represenatives today. Jean Harlow's Mate Ill, Sails for Europe

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP.)—Hal Rosson, Jean Harlow's husband, sailed last night on the Olympic for Europe. He was stricken with infantile paralysis June 18, and now is able to walk only with a cane.

Rosson, who is a cameraman for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, said he hoped to recover his health completely while abroad.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, July 21.—(Universal.)—J. P. Morgan, American financier, arrived last night aboard his yacht Corsair after a voyage from the United States.

New Vice Squad False Alarm in RadioCar 'Probe'

Pittsburgh's new vice squad, which was supposed to execute all kinds of startling raids, passed out of existence today before one joint had been knocked over.

It seems it was all a mistake. Acting Police Supt. Jacob F. Dorsey denied that he had ordered Lieut. Albert Florig to form such a squad. Some time ago, he admitted, he had contemplated such a squad, but had never taken any action.

Dorsey said that what he had instructed Florig to do was check up on the radio cruisers. There have been complaints that the radio cruisers were missing calls, were roaming outside their districts, according to the superintendent.

In fact, Dorsey added, he himself had checked up on these complaints for three nights, then discovered the job needed more time.

Eva LeGallienne Excused for Speed

NEW YORK, July 21.—(Universal.)—Eva Le Gallienne, celebrated actress and producer, presented a novel excuse for speeding in Bronx Traffic Court yesterday—and got away with it. Said she:

"Your Honor, I was so engrossed in my plans for the fall opening of the Civic Repertory Theater that I forgot to look at the speedometer."

Cat That Met King Dies of Old Age

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP.)—Minnie, the cat that wandered into the Artists and Writers Club 14 years ago and made many famous friends, died late yesterday of old age.

Minnie's friends included Caruso, Joe Cook and many others. She was introduced to the King of Siam on his visit to New York and had met the Crown Prince of Sweden.

FATAL FLOODS PERIL WARSAW

WARSAW, Poland, July 21.—(AP.)—Flood waters which have ravaged Southern Poland for days swirled today about the edges of Warsaw itself.

Residents of endangered zones were hastily evacuated. The Vistula River is expected to inundate lower sections of the city. Steamers were unable to pass under bridges.

The floods took some 30 to 40 lives when a bridge at Sandomir collapsed yesterday. At least 120 others are known to be dead in southern provinces, with more than that number missing.

Property damage running into many millions has been caused by the floods. Entire villages were inundated, crops destroyed and livestock wiped out.

Ruined Panama City Hit by New Quakes

PANAMA, July 21.—(AP.)—A second series of earthquakes terrorized inhabitants of David City, in interior Panama, early today. Nearly all of the town's buildings have been destroyed by disturbances of the past four days.

The latest shocks destroyed some damaged walls, but there were no casualties.

Astor, Bride Join Whirl Of Newport Society

In sharp contrast to their departure, no curious crowd greeted them on their arrival—not even their close friends were informed of their plans. The Astors arrived from New York by automobile.

The youthful newlyweds spent their first day at the palatial summer residence quietly. They received visits from only a few close friends and relatives. Today it was expected they would assume their place in the Newport summer colony.

Newport friends were not surprised at the Astors' early return from their honeymoon trip through the West. As one pointed out, young Astor repeatedly had said they planned to take but a short trip. They probably will go abroad in the fall.

Man Who Would Be King Gets Ride in Police Car

BARCELONA, Spain, July 21.—(AP.)—The man who would be king rode today in a police car instead of a royal coach. Stalwart detectives accompanied him instead of a bodyguard.

The reign of "Boris I," pretender to the throne of the little state of Andorra, crashed before it began. The charges were plebian: Disturbing the peace and being an undesirable alien.

Thus falls the curtain on a comedy that diverted Spain until the government decided it was not funny any more.

"Boris," in reality Boris Skossyref, a Pole, appeared not long ago, speaking six languages. He declared himself a knight-errant and proceeded to lay lavish claims to the throne of Andorra. Thereafter he occupied the center of an imaginary court in Seourgell, "awaiting the call of his people."

"Boris" was considered harmless at first, but finally the government decided to close his "performance." Andorra is a touchy spot these days because of the rivalry between French and Spanish interests in the tiny principality between them.

LABOR LEADER LAUDS PEACE AT FRISCO

WASHINGTON, July 21.—(AP.)—A firm stand against general strikes was maintained today by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Calling the San Francisco general strike a "grave mistake" and asserting labor leaders "acted wisely" in calling it off, President Green said:

"No sympathetic strike of any consequence or possessed of any national significance was ever won."

His words were interpreted as lessening the likelihood of another general strike in the United States, and striking a specific blow at any such sentiment in Portland, Ore., and Minneapolis.

Government officials, though silent, seemed more hopeful today that the Pacific Coast troubles will yield to arbitration. They awaited a definite "break" in the maritime situation.

Their optimism was somewhat offset by reports from Minneapolis, telling of bloody clashes which federal attempts at mediation had not succeeded in preventing and an appeal for a general strike.

Green's statement pointed to the dangers to workmen themselves as the result of sympathetic strikes. He said:

"Workers who are organized into unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor cannot afford to engage in a sympathetic strike when such action calls for the violation of contracts arrived at through collective bargaining and involves the possibility of losing all economic gains they have secured through years of sacrifice and effort."

In such a strike, he said, there arises a conflict between workers and the government in which the latter "must win," the strikers lose and the employers against whom the original strike was aimed "become the beneficiaries."

The San Francisco trouble did not reach that point, he said, and organized labor can demand that the disputes "responsible for the longshoremen's strike are all submitted to a fair tribunal."

GENERAL STRIKE SOUGHT AFTER SHOOTINGS

the men who brought about the breaking of that promise."

Aid of the guardsmen, if requested, has been promised him, Chief Johannes said in announcing he would convoy any trucks whose owners wanted to move goods today. He added:

"If the pickets try to stop us—well, you know what we did yesterday."

Yesterday police convoyed a truck of merchandise to its destination after a sharp battle with strikers who sought to stop it, a few blocks from where the May strike riots cost the lives of two men.

Blasts from police shotguns drove off the attackers, who fled over blood reddened pavements. Leaden pellets drilled holes in bodies and at least three strikers were critically wounded.

They were being given oxygen at the city hospital today in an effort to save their lives.

STRIKERS IN RALLY

Strikers and their sympathizers rallied at a huge open air mass meeting last night to hear Congressman Francis Shoemaker, among others, denounce the "brutal massacre."

The crowd called for banishment from office of Chief Johannes, branded by strikers as the "stool pigeon" of Mayor Bainbridge, whose removal also was demanded in a resolution to Gov. Olson.

William Brown, president of the Truck Drivers Union No. 574, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, berated the Minnesota Law and Order League as a "murderers' association," termed the violent outbreak a "wholesale slaughter," and asked:

"Are we going to let these people shoot us down like dogs or are we going to fight back?"

Police were urged to resign, and Robert Cramer, labor leader, announced 55 patrolmen had turned in their badges in protest.

Chief Johannes' reply was:

"Not a single man has resigned. I have not got that kind of weak sisters on my police force."

Nineteen of the strikers who suffered minor wounds were up and about soon after yesterday's shooting. Many others were released from hospitals.

PEACE CONFERENCE

Hardly an hour before the outbreak, Father Haas, who, with E. H. Dunnigan, is trying to mediate the strike, had axpressed optimism over the outlook for settlement. He had earlier presented a skeleton plan as a basis for erasing the dispute, arising from the drivers' demands for higher wages and wider union recognition—an outgrowth of the settlement in the May walkout.

Strikers claimed the employers had not adhered to terms of the May peace pact that ended a controversy centered chiefly about union recognition and collective bargaining.

Meetings of both sides were called today to consider their next move in the impasse, the drivers insisting no trucks would move until adequate protection was promised.

G. O. P. PUZZLED BY MARGIOTTI, PINCHOT TALK

Rumors of Third Party Revived as Defeated Candidates Confer

Associated Press.

Talk of a third party movement in Pennsylvania this fall has been stirred up again by conferences of unsuccessful Republican candidates at the May primaries.

A discreet silence on the part of Charles J. Margiotti, Punxsutawney attorney, who lost a close race for Governor; David E. Kaufman, Towanda runner-up in the Lieutenant Governor fight, and Gov. Pinchot, loser in his run for United States Senator David A. Reed's place, helped aggravate the rumors after meetings involving the three yesterday.

Neither Margiotti nor Kaufman would confirm or deny reports they would try again as third party candidates for the posts they sought in May, nor would they indorse Republican or Democratic candidates.

And at his Milford home the Governor said his talk with Margiotti concerned "all kinds of politics," but that the two had reached "no conclusion."

While Margiotti and Kaufman conferred in Philadelphia, a path was beaten to their door by a long line of politicians, including former Mayor Harry A. Mackey; T. Duncan Just, former Pinchot leader in Montgomery County; James C. Clark, William S. Vare's lieutenant on the Philadelphia County Commissioners' Board; Adrian Bonnelly, former Margiotti leader in Philadelphia; Mayor Ambrose Langan, Pittston, and Patrick A. Kennedy, Pittsburgh attorney.

With no hint of a third party, Mackey flatly declared that Pennsylvania Republicans would be better off in November without National Chairman Henry P. Fletcher or "any national issues."

POLICE PROBE'S CHARGES 'LIE,' BOYD SAYS

Former Detective Head Denies Taking Graft Or 'Collecting'

Frank R. Boyd, former detective captain and inspector, returned to Pittsburgh today, ready, he said, to "match my record with anyone's."

Told of charges and inferences which linked him with the "rackets," Boyd answered:

"I don't know what they're saying about me, but whatever it is, it's a lie."

Boyd said he would be willing to appear before the Police Research Commission, where it previously was inferred that he was Police Supt. Ben R. Marshall's "collector."

Boyd declared:

"I'll appear, and if they don't have the stuff to back up what charges they make, it'll just be too bad."

DENIES 'COLLECTIONS'

Boyd denied taking graft or "collecting."

Former Inspector James N. Hoey had startled the Police Commission hearing two weeks ago by asking Director of Public Safety A. Marshall Bell:

"Did you know that Boyd was Marshall's collector?"

Boyd said today:

"My record is open. I'm not afraid of an investigation.

"From what I hear you'd think old Ben Marshall and I were the only men on the police force for the last three administrations. It's a shame to hear of anyone attacking old Ben. He's a fine fellow, my friend for 30 years, and one of the best police superintendents the city ever had.

'TRAINED BY THE BEST'

"And for myself, I'll match my police record with anyone's. I was trained by the best of detectives, Jack Lally, who knew every pickpocket in the country. I've made more than 300 arrests, many of them so-called 'big shots.'

"I've done nothing that I'm afraid of. And as for Smith (former Public Safety Director Ralph E. Smith) I'll stack my record against his any time."

Asked about charges made about him and former Inspector Hoey's comments during Police Commission hearings, the former detective answered:

"I don't know about them. I just got back. I've been down on the shore.

"But I can say that I'm still a Republican. The Republican party took care of me a good many years, as it did Hoey. I just had a few months to go (for his 20 years' service) in the new administration. The rest all registered Democrat. I registered Republican. It's a shame a man of my years and experience has to quit and can't give his best years to the police department."

PROBERS TO SEE COUNCIL

Meanwhile, the Police Commission will meet City Council in a body next Monday and present its first recommendations based on testimony given at the police hearings.

No definite date has been set for the next public hearing. It will likely be determined at a commission conference Tuesday night in the office of Dr. Albert I. Wise.

FRISCO PEACE MOVE GROWS

announced plans for immediate resumption of freight and passenger service and cargoes piled high in piers from the prolonged blockade started to move despite the siege of strikers.

The action of the San Francisco teamsters, who voted 1,138 to 283 to resume all work, was admittedly a severe blow to the embattled longshoremen and seamen whose picket lines have been pushed back by the bayonets of National Guardsmen.

The marine and dock workers were urged by J. F. Vizzard, president of the San Francisco Draymen's Association, to select new leaders and submit to arbitration. Vizzard interpreted the teamsters' vote as a direct blow at Harry Bridges, militant longshoreman's leader, who has held out for union control of hiring agencies and simultaneous settlements with all maritime unions.

STREET CAR STRIKE

Aside from the maritime unions, the only workers still on strike in the San Francisco region are the American Federation of Labor street car men employed by the Market Street Railway Company here.

C. J. O'Brien, second international vice president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, declared the men will remain out until the company grants increased pay and shorter hours or submits to arbitration. Samuel Kahn, president of the company, declared service will be resumed gradually despite the strike.

Drives against alleged Communists, which started in the San Francisco Bay region, spread throughout Northern California. Citizen groups were organized at a score of towns, and at Stockton 1,000 men stormed and wrecked an alleged Communist meeting place after a disturbance in the city square, during which police made several arrests.

Miss Margaretta Curry, late of 5812 Solway street, left $21,000 to various charities and divided the balance of her $275,000 estate between her brother, Charles L. Curry, of Warriors Mark, Pa., his children and two score of nieces, nephews, grand nieces and nephews. Her estate was nearly all in stocks and bonds, large blocks of which are assigned to each of the relatives.

Charitable bequests follow:

Methodist Home Missionary Society, $2,500; Methodist Episcopal Foreign Missionary Society, $2,500; Elizabeth Bradley Home, Hulton, $2,000; Deaconess' Home, $1,000; Epworth Fresh Air Home, $2,500; Children's Hospital, $2,500; Kingsley House, $500; St. Barnaba's Home, $500; Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, $2,000; University of Pittsburgh, $2,500; Homeopathic Hospital, $2,500.

MIRROR STRIKE PARLEY CALLED

MANORVILLE, Pa., July 21.—Striking employes of the National Mirror Specialty Company were to meet here today with A. C. Jewett and Ernest C. Dunbar, of the Regional Labor Board, in an attempt to settle difficulties between workers of the plant and its owner, Leon H. Samuels.

About 50 strikers have been out since Monday, demanding wages of 30 cents an hour and an eight-hour day. W. E. Fields, chairman of the strike committee, said Samuels has been violating a temporary code for the industry by working his employes 10 hours daily at 14 cents an hour.

Fields said yesterday his group is willing to abide by the decision of the Labor Board and will probably return to work Monday. He declared his employer has also indicated his willingness to accept the board's ruling.

Musician Deserted, Gets Divorce Decree

Charles G. Fischer, a musician, of 4123 Perrysville avenue, was granted a divorce in Common Pleas Court yesterday, after testifying that when he returned from a trip to New York he learned his wife, Nancy D. Fischer, 940 Ridge avenue, had deserted him.

Fischer said they had lived with his parents, but that his wife did not do any housework, spent most of her time in their automobile and ran up bills which caused arguments. They were married in 1925 and parted in January, 1933.

UNION ATTACKS TROLLEY SPEED

Speeded schedules on the Pittsburgh Railways lines have doubled the hazards to the trolley motormen, Joseph Thomas, business agent of the street car men's union, had testified today before a special arbitration board.

In order to keep to the schedules made by the trolley company, the men have to operate cars at their top speed, and the increased speed results in more serious accidents, he said.

Waiving cross-examination of O. David Zimring, special counsel for the union men, Attorneys Carl E. Glock and Leslie Vickers for the company, declared they will refute the testimony by direct exhibits when they begin to present their case next week.

Other union officials and workers will be called to testify for the union before their side of the case is closed. The board, composed of Dr. Joseph W. Madden, impartial chairman; Councilman John J. Kane, for the union, and Philip A. Fleger for the company, will resume hearings Monday morning.

STENOG FIGHTS EX-PREMIER

EDMONTON, Alta., July 21.—(AP.)—A notice of an appeal from the decision of Justice W. C. Ives in the civil action brought against J. E. Brownlee, former Premier of Alberta, by Miss Vivian MacMillan and her father has been filed here today.

Miss MacMillan, his stenographer, and her father sought damages from Brownlee on a charge the girl had been seduced by the Premier. A jury awarded them $15,000, but the verdict was set aside by Justice Ives. He refused to enter the jury's verdict.

KIN OF FOSTER BACKS FORD

The house that Henry Ford bought is once again up for discussion, with Mrs. Jessie Rose, granddaughter of Stephen C. Foster siding with the motor magnate in his contention that he acquired the composer's birthplace. It is at 3414 Penn avenue.

Mrs. Rose is the caretaker of the city's Foster Memorial Home at 3600 Penn avene. She said that when James H. Park, steel man, purchased it for presentation to the city, she told him he was getting the wrong building.

His reply, she declared, was that "he didn't care; he merely wanted a memorial to Foster."

Henry Ford, according to Mrs. Rose, got the house which Foster's wife had frequently pointed out to her as the birthplace of her husband.

Saying she was glad the right home went to Dearborn, Mrs. Rose added:

"No one paid any attention to it. I feel just as though it had died and gone to heaven."

JOHNSON FLAYS REDS IN STRIKE

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, July 21.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, National Recovery Administrator, today had trained his oratorical big guns on the alien radicals, charged by him with the present industrial unrest in the United States.

The Administrator in a radio speech which brought the wildest and most spontaneous of cheers from a huge crowd in the Hollywood Bowl late yesterday, demanded that organized labor in the United States "run the submersive element out of its ranks like rats."

Johnson declared that he had been told that if all of the aliens in the nation were deported there would be enough jobs for more than one-third of the unemployed. He said:

"I don't suggest such a move but I do suggest that any alien who pretends to lead an economic group of our people in the direction of strife and bloodshed has no place here and should no more be tolerated than an armed enemy under a foreign flag."

Camp Meeting Opens Near Leetsdale

JOHNSON MUM IN HOSIERY PACT

WASHINGTON, July 21.—(AP.)—Hugh S. Johnson's opinion about the settlement that restored the Blue Eagle to the Harriman Hosiery Mills remained undisclosed today.

In the ranks of his assistants, however, there was dissention over it. Some officials said it "repudiated" Johnson's previous stand.

A. R. Glancy, field compliance administrator, negotiated and signed the agreement. George L. Berry, division administrator whom Johnson designated to handle the case, was dissatisfied with the peace pact.

Acmetonia Miners Hold Peace Meet

United Mine Workers of America delegates from the Allegheny-Kiskiminetas Valley were to gather at Acmetonia today for a meeting which local officials of the union say will assure peace among miners of the region. Revocation of the union charter of Logan's Ferry Locail No. 6344 is said to have averted a coal strike throughout the valley.

City Employes to Retire August 1

After more than 30 years of service with the city, T. Lloyd Pillow, superintendent of the Bureau of Highways and Sewers, will retire on pension August 1, and William B. Shafer, present assistant superintendent, will take over the post.

Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston announced the change. The superintendent's job pays $3,750 a year.

McNair Seeks Data On 1935 Budget

Mayor McNair has sent a letter to city department heads asking them to start immediate consideration of their 1935 budget needs and to furnish his office with the data. He asked that the information be sent to him by August 27.

Ickes Starts Federal Power Ownership Study

WASHINGTON, July 21—(AP.)—Before leaving the capital on his first vacation since taking over a cabinet post, Secretary Ickes pointed the new National Power Policy Committee toward a study of government ownership of power, and a plan for pushing distribution lines into hitherto untouched fields.

As an alternative to ownership, the committee will consider a program for placing the government as a middleman between the dynamo and the light bulb as purchaser and seller of power.

The final form the plan may take will depend, obviously, on findings of the committee in its study of the broad power field. Even in advance of committee deliberations, however, power experts said entrance of the government into the power market as buyer and seller would mean federal control of prices and sources.

The commitee is purely an advisory body to the President and any recommendations it advances will not necessarily become administration policy. But its word unquestionably will carry appreciable weight, and its members almost unanimously are staunch believers in the precept of public control of natural resources. A high official said:

"The committee will formulate a national power policy in which will be developed a plan for better co-operation between the various federal agencies dealing with the problem and for welding together the several factors having to do with the national power supply, public and private."

Railroad Boards Named By Roosevelt on Cruise

International News Service.

ABOARD U. S. S. NEW ORLEANS, accompanying President Roosevelt to Hawaii, July 21.—President Roosevelt today announced the appointment of three members of the National Mediation Board and the chairman of the new Railroads Retirement Board.

The three men appointed to the National Mediation Board to administer rail disputes are William M. Leiserson, Yellow Springs, O.; James M. Carmalt, Washington, D. C., and John Carmody, now chief engineer of the Federal Emergency Relief organization.

Murray Latimer was named chairman of the Railroads Retirement Board, but the President is awaiting recommendations from the carriers and employes before naming the other two members of the board.

Both boards were created by the last Congress.

The President today addressed the crew of the Houston, assembled on deck of the cruiser which is carrying the President to Hawaii, and praised their seamanship.

Weather Conditions

Pressure is relatively low over the Atlantic Coast, over the Great Central Plains and westward over the Rocky Mountains. The principal center of low pressure is over South Dakota, 29.64 inches at Huron. High pressure covers the Gulf states. This distribution of pressure is causing mostly clear skies over the country, and high temperatures. Rainfall for the last 24 hours was limited to widely scattered showers. High maximum temperatures of 100 degrees or higher occurred yesterday over a wide belt extending from the Rock Mountains eastward to the upper Ohio. At Columbus, O., 102 degrees was registered. High temperature records were broken in Missouri, Nebraska and South Dakota where 110 degrees occurred. The maximum temperature at Kansas City was 108 degrees on seven of the last eight days.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY MOURNS BRECKINRIDGE'S DAUGHTER

SHOOTING LAID TO ACCIDENT DURING HIKE

Mother, Former Wife Of Lindy Advisor, Finds Body

WASHINGTON, July 21.—(AP.)—The capital's society was saddened today by the target shooting accident which cost the life of Louise Dudley Breckinridge, 17-year-old daughter of Col. Henry Breckinridge.

The girl, who had gone target shooting at Battery Park, near Bethesda, Md., died instantly yesterday when her .32 caliber rifle caught in a fence she was trying to scale and discharged a bullet into her heart.

Her father, a close friend and legal adviser of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, was Assistant Secretary of War under President Wilson. He is a prominent New York lawyer.

Mrs. Ruth Breckinridge, mother of the girl and first wife of Col. Breckinridge, found the body last night after her daughter had been missing several hours from her home at Battery Park, a Washington suburb.

County police and physicians who investigated said she apparently had attempted to climb over a board fence when one of her feet caught between the boards. In attempting to free her foot, she evidently caught the gun in the fence, discharging it.

Her body plunged down into the field of an estate formerly owned by Mrs. Edward B. McLean, possessor of the Hope diamond. When the girl did not return home, her alarmed mother started a search. When she found the body, she screamed, attracting neighbors. Today she was near collapse and under the care of a physician.

Since his marriage to the dead girl's mother was terminated several years ago, Col. Breckinridge has remarried. His first wife has been living on the Battery Park estate with Louise and another daughter, Miss Elizabeth Foster Breckinridge.

Miss Louise Breckinridge, member of the younger society set of the capital, was a sophomore at Vassar College.

HUEY LONG FOES FIGHT OUSTERS

NEW ORLEANS, July 21.—(AP.)—New Orleans' Mayor, police chief and District Attorney today flatly defied Gov. O. K. Allen to remove them from office.

The Governor wrote an open letter yesterday to Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, Police Supt. George Reyer and District Attorney Eugene Stanley, saying they would be removed from office and prosecuted unless they took action against gambling, vice and "other crime" which Allen charged was rampant in the city.

Senator Huey P. Long, director of the state administration, characterized New Orleans as a "cesspool of iniquity" in addresses early this week.

Supt. Reyer assigned eight men to the District Attorney's office when informed of Gov. Allen's action, and instructed them to permit no unauthorized persons to enter or "tamper with records."

C. O. D. Parcel Post To Germany Stopped

Postmaster William M. Turner has received instructions from the Postoffice Department at Washington cancelling, until further notice, all C. O. D. parcel post packages addressed for Germany.

The notice came in the form of a bulletin said to have been issued to postmasters all over the country, advising that the postal authorities of Germany refuse to allow entry of this type of mail. No reason was given for the German order.

Hitler Quits Berlin For Week-End Trip

BERLIN, July 21.—(AP.)—Chancellor Hitler has left Berlin on what apparently is one of his usual week-end holiday excursions.

was convicted of soliciting funds from relief workers.

Contrasting strangely with the burly figures of preceding speakers, Mrs. Langer was cheered at a mass meeting last night as "the next Governor of North Dakota."

The "nomination" of Mrs. Langer, housewife, social leader and product of the polished East, came from approximately 1,200 men and women who had waited hours for her appearance.

Support also met the announcement that Langer's conviction in Federal Court would be investigated, regardless of whether a Senate quorum was obtained.

Hundreds of marchers yesterday descended on the State House to demand a special Legislature session. This was refused by Lieut. Gov. Ole H. Olson, occupying the chief executive's office by order of the State Supreme Court.

In defiance to Olson's orders, a majority favorable to Langer assembled yesterday for the second day in answer to Langer's call for a special session. A quorum was present in the House, but the Senate lacked five members for a quorum. Langer adherents predicted the additional five would be rounded up.

As the members assembled at the State House National Guard troops stood by with fixed bayonets.

FRENCH CRISIS POSTPONED

PARIS, July 21.—(AP.)—The future of France, endangered by a clash between Andre Tardieu and radical Socialist members of the cabinet, was once again today in the hands of 71-year-old "Papa" Gaston Doumergue.

Failing to heal the breach within their ranks, the ministers called the Premier and former President in to act as umpire.

Doumergue will not return to Paris from the south of France until next Tuesday or Wednesday, counting on time to let party passions simmer down.

Louis Barthou, Foreign Minister and twice a Premier, appeared to be the only dissident. He demanded that Tardieu, also a former Premier and now minister without portfolio in the political truce cabinet, resign forthwith.

Tardieu raised a storm by charging radical Socialists knew of the inside dealings of Serge Stavisky before the Bayonne pawnshop collapsed, creating a national scandal. President Doumergue, it was believed, will ask the ministers to carry on and drop their quarrels until September.

Strikers Have Lost 15,000,000 Working Days In One Year

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Washington gives us an idea of how much strikes cost the working man. The boys have lost 15,000,000 working days this year.

They sacrificed $50,000,000 in wages in six months. That ain't hay.

Like a fishing story, the returns are not all in. It can always be added to.

We heard Mayor Rossi, of San Francisco, on the air Thursday. He sounded both happy and worried. Something like a proud mother whose boy just got a year off for good behavior.

Seems that it would be a good thing for everybody if we stopped yelling about labor and capital. There ain't much difference between an employer and his employe, a contractor and his mason or a farmer and his hired hand.

The only difference is that the boss does the worrying. If you want to become a boss it's easy. Don't forget that Ben Franklin did it with a trip from Boston to Philadelphia and a loaf of bread.

HOLD 2 NAMED BY BLIND MAN

Identified by their voices in the blinding and robbery of George Stratigos, bowling alley proprietor, two bandit suspects were held for court today on charges of holdup and robbery, pointing firearms and larceny of an automobile.

Nick Delembeis, 22, and John Arendash, 23, both of 445 Fifth avenue, Homestead, were held jointly on three charges of robbery in connection with robberies of two gasoline service stations and the Stratigos holdup.

Delembeis was held on five additional charges of robbery in connection with holdups of restaurants. Mike Arendash, 22, brother of John, whose automobile, police say, was used on several holdups, was held pending further investigation.

Testifying at the hearing before Magistrate J. W. McGowan in Central Police Court, Stratigos, his sightless eyes hidden by dark glasses, said:

"I wish that I could see, I would be more satisfied, but yesterday, I identified the voices."

George Ade Gains After Heart Attack

IMMORAL PARTY DENIED BY DAVE AND GLORIA

Story of Star Witness Assailed by Former Casting Director

LOS ANGELES, July 21.—(AP.)—Vigorous denials of state charges that Dave Allen and Miss Gloria Marsh participated in an alleged "wild party" were part of the bulky record in the Hollywood "morals" trial today as the court recessed over the week-end.

Emphasizing his words with fierce gestures, Allen, on leave of absence as manager of the Central Casting Bureau, denied he took part with Miss June DeLong, film extra and state's star witness, in an immoral party at her apartment, last April 26. Miss Marsh, who said she was the wife of a bus driver, made a similar denial.

If any immoral act took place in Miss DeLong's apartment, the defendants testified, it was committed solely by the flaxen haired state's witness, whose hands have "doubled" in motion pictures for those of many famous feminine stars.

'VILLAIN' BLAMED

Both contended they were invited to the apartment as part of a "frame-up" inspired by Pat Harman, screen villain, and Mrs. Pearl Owings, identified by some witnesses as "Mrs. Harman."

The alleged party, the defense has contended, was part of a plot inspired by enemies of Allen, who sought to cause him to lose his position as manager of the casting bureau, which handles extra players for film studios.

ALMOST NUDE

After they had reached Miss DeLong's apartment separately, the defendants testified, Miss De Long and Miss Marsh went into the dressing room. Miss Marsh said:

"I went in the bathroom, and when I came out Miss DeLong was nude except for a transparent crepe slip, which was quite revealing.

"I asked her what she meant by the manner in which she was dressed, and she replied: 'Never mind; just follow me.'"

Millions in Bonds Delivered to Dentist Chair

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP.)—A dentist's work was interrupted yesterday to enable the City of New York to make delivery on $3,500,000 worth of its recently sold bonds.

Bernard S. Deutsch, president of the Board of Aldermen and acting mayor in the absence of Fiorello H. LaGuardia, was in the dentist's chair when a messenger entered the office with a sheaf of engraved certificates exchangeable for three and a half million dollars — once Deutsch had signed.

Dr. Saul Eisner stopped drilling. The acting mayor affixed his signature on the bonds. The City of New York made good its promised delivery.

LAWYER WARNS HICKMAN JURY

Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—Harry McKenzie, defense attorney for Millard Hickman, charged with the murder of pretty Louise Jeppesen, 23, on May 13, has bitterly attacked the case built up by the prosecution.

He denounced particularly yesterday the testimony of Paterno Natividad, Filipino elevator boy at Hickman's hotel, by whom the state had tried to show that Hickman and Louise left that hotel together about an hour before Louise was slain in Golden Gate Park. McKenzie ripped into the boy's story, and finally told the jury:

"If you send Millard Hickman to the gallows on this kind of testimony, then every one of you is a murderer."

The trial was in recess today until Monday.

DIES REFUSING TO BARE CRIMES

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP.)—Herbert Myers, alleged mail robber and jail breaker, died early today without telling the police the things they wanted to know about his recent career.

The man was shot down resisting arrest Thursday wehn police trapped him at the apartment of his estranged wife. He lunged at Detective Frank O'Neill with a knife. O'Neill shot him.

Only a few hours before his death Myers was cleared of the murder of Detective James Garvey. Garvey's partner, who witnessed his slaying, went to the wounded criminal's bedside, but after a look at Myers said:

"It's not the man."

Detectives told Myers he was dying and urged him to clear his conscience by confessing his crimes, but he merely shook his head.

Zanfretta, Stage Clown, Dies at 79

PASADENA, Cal., July 21.—(AP.)—A pantomimist and stage clown of international reputation, William H. (dad) Zanfretta, 79, died yesterday after a lingering illness.

Born in Oldtown, San Diego, in 1854, he was the son of Antone Ravel Zanfretta, a direct descendant of Tiberia Piurrelo, famous Italian pantomimist. His mother was a descendant of John Rich, noted English pantomimist.

Movie Art Director Again Sues Wife

LOS ANGELES, July 21.—(AP.)—A new suit for divorce was filed yesterday by Jean Negulesco, movie art director, against Winifred Negulesco, charging desertion, cruelty and association with another man. A former divorce suit was dropped.

Negulesco named Franklin J. Swigert, and said Mrs. Negulesco posed as Swigert's wife in New York City in 1931.

BRIDGE LEAPER RESCUED, FINED

Frank Levandowsky, 32, of 106 Forty-fourth street, jumped 110 feet from the Washington Crossing Bridge into the Allegheny River yesterday, and this morning paid $5 for the privilege of living to tell about it.

The $5 was his fine on a disorderly conduct charge in Penn Avenue olice Court. Police reported Levandowsky told them the heat "got him" and he jumped into the river to cool off. This morning, he had a different version, saying friends had dared him to make the leap.

He was pulled out of the river by Clifford Keil, a guard at a city pool near the bridge.

He was the third person saved from possible drowning in the Allegheny River yesterday. Earlier, an unidentified woman jumped out of an automobile on the Sixth Street Bridge and tried to leap from the bridge railing. A pedestrian frustrated the attempt.

The third person, an aged man, was rescued after wading beyond his depth in the river near Manchester Bridge.

P. R. R. ORDERS ENGINES HERE

Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company today was given an order for 12 electric locomotives, part of a $6,000,000 order for 28 similar locomotives placed by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The new electric locomotives, part of a fleet of 101 to be purchased by the railroad, will be placed in operation on the new electric service between New York and Washington to be inaugurated next year.

Little Fish Chases Girls Out of Pool

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—(INS.)—A tiny, black catfish today held possession of one of the city's bathhouse pools for two hours. It was girls' day, but despite the heat they refused to enter the water.

Two boys were recruited. Armed with nets they dived into the cool water and swam around, purposely bungling the job. But when the girls "got wise" and started booing the boys made short work of netting Mr. Catfish.

DOUG MAY FLEE TO U. S. WITH LADY ASHLEY

Actor Burning Bridges Behind Him in Peer's Lawsuit

By GEORGE LAIT
International News Service.

LONDON, July 21.—When the divorce suit of Lord Ashley, heir to the Earl of Shaftesbury, against Lady Ashley, the former Sylvia Hawkes, of stage fame, comes to trial, both Lady Ashley and Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., who has been named co-respondent, may be in the United States, it was learned today.

Lady Ashley, it was said, is planning to go to Hollywood and is considering an offer to go into motion pictures. Fairbanks already has announced his intention of returning to California in the near future.

It was understood that both of them probably would leave England within a few weeks for the United States.

FLIGHT CHEAPER

In view of this it was regarded as a distinct possibility that when Lord Ashley's suit comes to trial, probably in October, both Fairbanks and Lady Ashley will find that their engagements in America will make it difficult for them to return to London. Since both have denied formally Lord Ashley's charges of misconduct, however, the stage is set for them to fight the suit if they are able to return to this country.

From a purely financial viewpoint, it might be cheaper for Fairbanks to remain in the United States and not defend the suit. If the action is not defended, the worst that could happen would be that Lord Ashley might get a judgment for damages in a comparatively small amount, along with negligible costs, which Fairbanks would be ordered to pay.

But if Fairbanks and Lady Ashley put up a battle, legal authorities pointed out, court costs of a trial that probably would last a week or more might amount to $50,000, in addition to whatever damages might be assessed if the verdict were in favor of Lord Ashley.

BURNS BRIDGES

When a divorce suit is won by default, however, it is usually only a five-minute affair and costs are inconsiderable.

Indications that Fairbanks intends virtually to burn his bridges behind him when he leaves England were seen in the fact that he has disposed of a large part of his holdings here and, it is reported, will sell practically everything he owns here before he leaves.

Although his representatives here have stated that Fairbanks is in Monte Carlo, reports persisted that he has been seen in London during the past 24 hours.

VANISHED BRIDE CLUE HINTED

International News Service.

VIENNA, July 21.—The New York police cabled Vienna police headquarters requesting that Capt. Ivan Poderjay and his wife, Mme. Suzanne Ferrand, be held in jail here pending the arrival of most important evidence in connection with the disappearance of Agnes Tufverson, New York lawyer, who married Poderjay in New York.

The nature of the evidence was not disclosed.

Poderjay, former Jugo-Slavian army officer, is held here on charges of bigamy and suspicion of murder, and Mme. Ferrand on charges of suspicion of having profited by a murder.

The Vienna police, impatient at the failure of New York authorities to take further action, were reported to be preparing to release the couple.

'Bride' of Girls' 'Wedding' Sent Away

HARRISBURG, July 21.—(INS.)—Margaret Zerbe, the "bride" in a strange marriage with another girl, Effie Erdman, was removed to the State Industrial Home for Women at Muncy today.

The Erdman girl, who attired herself in male clothing and posed as "James Erdman" in a marriage ceremony at Portsmouth, Va., was removed to Muncy several weeks ago on a charge of violating a parole on delinquency charges.

Guarding One of Two Governors

NATIONAL GUARD SENTRIES AT THE DOORS OF GOV. WILLIAM H. LANGER'S OFFICE

The strange scene at Bismarck, North Dakota, under martial law, which complicates further the situation under which two "governors"—William H. Langer, ordered ousted by the state supreme court because of his conviction (federal) of a felony, and Lieut-Gov. Ole Olson, who "moved up"—have been issuing conflicting orders and proclamations. Credit 'Hoarders' Fined In German Trade Crisis

BERLIN, July 21.—(AP.)—Prison terms and fines added force today to Germany's desperate efforts to shield her perilously scanty supply of foreign exchange.

Hendrich Bahlmann, of Holland, was sentenced to seven months' imprisonment and fined 12,000 marks (about $4,800) for "treason against public economy" for failing to reveal possession of a 90,000-florin credit in a Dutch bank.

The two Germans were sentenced to three years and one month and one year and two months, respectively, for concealing much larger amounts.

New restrictions on the imports of fibrous and textile materials and steps toward reorganizing industrial life on a "self-sufficiency" basis indicated Germany was in desperate straits so far as international trade is concerned.

Such moves led observers to believe the third Reich is rapidly approaching a crisis in her financial life from which there will be no escape unless help comes from abroad in the form of new credits, lower tariffs or extraordinary bartering arrangements.

Ohio Heiress Accused Of Heart Theft Weds

ALLIANCE, O., July 21.—(AP.)—The marriage of Miss Ann Sharer, of Alliance, who once was sued for $50,000 for alienation of a Wilmington (Del.) broker's affections, to Harry Barnes Johansen, of St. Louis, Mo., had been announced here today.

Johansen, a shoe manufacturer, married Miss Sharer February 3 at Waukegan, Ill. They will make their home in St. Louis.

The former Miss Sharer, niece of Col. William Morgan, millionaire Alliance manufacturer, became involved in the alienation suit in Cleveland in 1933, as the result of an alleged ship-board romance with Theodore W. Canning, young Wilmington broker.

Canning at that time was married, but had filed suit for divorce in the courts at Reno, Nev. It was reported he intended to marry Miss Sharer as soon as the divorce was granted.

However, Canning later found it impossible to obtain the divorce, and the suit by his wife against Miss Sharer followed.

U. P. CHURCH PLANS MISSION MEET AT WESTMINSTER

PARLEY TO HEAR WORKERS FROM 4 FIELDS

Thirty-four missionaries from Egypt, India, Sudan and Ethiopia, the four mission fields of the United Presbyterian Church, will address the twenty-ninth annual missionary conference of the church at Westminster College, New Wilmington, August 3 to 10.

Conference speakers will include Dr. W. B. Anderson, of Philadelphia, foreign board secretary; Russell H. Glazier, of the China Inland Mission; Dr. Neal D. McClanahan, of Assuit, Egypt; Butros Abdul Melik, Egyptian pastor; Dr. Thomas C. Pollock, of Philadelphia; Mrs. J. P. White, editor of the Women's Missionary Magazine; the Rev. Stillman A. Foster, of Pittsburgh, and Dr. John E. Simpson, of Buffalo.

Dr. Mills J. Taylor, foreign board member, is conference chairman, assisted by John Ralston, of Wilkinsburg; Miss C. Dorothy Kirkbride, of the Westminster Conservatory faculty; Alan B. Davis, conservatory director; Miss Emma Kensil, of Philadelphia, dean of mission study; Miss Luellen Wilson, of Ben Avon, and others.

Accommodations for 500 are available, it is announced. The Rev. William Turnbull, West Park pastor, and Miss Ethel G. Forbes, of Pittsburgh, are in charge of quarters.

The daily schedule will include devotions, Bible study, sports and social events, vesper services and tabernacle meetings.

The Story of Elijah :-: CHAPTER III :-: TOLD IN PICTURES By DAN SMITH

Jezebel, wife of King Ahab, threatened the life of Elijah because he had slain all the prophets of Baal. So Elijah fled, and for forty days he lived on food an angel provided, and lodged then in a cave on Horeb.

Then a mighty wind rent the mountain, then an earthquake, and then a great fire, but the voice of the Lord was not in them. Then Elijah heard a still, small voice, and the Lord bade him return and anoint Jehu as King.

So Elijah departed and found Elisha, son of Shaphat, plowing with twelve yoke of oxen before him, and as he passed him, Elijah cast his mantle upon Elisha. Then Elisha ran after Elijah and said, "Let me, I pray thee, kiss my father and my mother, then I will follow thee." So Elisha turned back and slew a yoke of oxen and fed the people; and after they did eat, he arose and went after Elijah and ministered unto him.

Mormons to Mark 87th Anniversary

Celebrating the eighty-seventh anniversary of the arrival of Mormon pioneers in Great Salt Lake Valley, missionaries and members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints from all eastern states will hold a three-day meeting at Palmyra, N. Y., beginning tomorrow.

TURNER OUSTER SERMON TOPIC

Reaction to the dismissal of Dr. Ralph E. Turner from the University of Pittsburgh faculty will be the subject of a sermon "Religion and Education," by the Rev. Harold F. Stoddard at the Bellevue Baptist Church tomorrow morning.

To date, Dr. Turner's dismissal has brought criticism from Gov. Pinchot, praise from a group of 21 Wilkinsburg churches and protests from liberal and labor organizations, Pitt Alumni and other campus organizations.

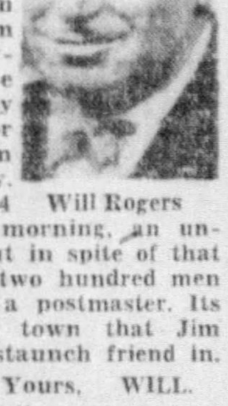
Dr. Stoddard has been active in the interest of the council for peace and social action.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., July 21.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

One of the funniest angles to the strike in San Francisco, bartenders had been out of work for 14 years, just been back in for six months, then called out again. I was working yesterday and missed all the lunches given my friend Jim Farley. Everybody in the state but Baby Leroy is running for governor, so Jim endorsed Leroy. He arrived at 4 o'clock in the morning, an unearthly hour, but in spite of that there was over two hundred men there, everyone a postmaster. Its a mighty poor town that Jim hasn't got one staunch friend in.



Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

Five Dollar Prize Winner

MRS. JOHN B. KERR
Ford street, Fore City.
EGGPLANT STUFFED WITH SHRIMPS

One large eggplant.
One six-ounce can of shrimps.
Four small white onions chopped fine.
One tablespoon minced parsley.
One-half pound cheese.
Two tablespoons butter.
Bread crumbs.

Pare, boil the eggplant whole until tender, then cut in half lengthwise. Scoop out the center and cut the pulp into small pieces. Remove the membrane from the shrimp and chop. Add the onions, parsley and cheese cut in small pieces to the pulp and shrimp. Mix thoroughly adding a little salt and pepper. Stuff the eggplant halves with the mixture, sprinkle with bread crumbs, dot with the butter and bake in a slow oven at 325 degrees for 25 minutes.

Five $1 Prize Winners

MRS. JOSEPH BALOGH,
325 West Seventh avenue, Tarentum.
ENDIVE SALAD

Separate the endive into pieces and clean; drain and put in the refrigerator to chill thoroughly. Cut cold cooked beets into slices, and the slices into rings and fancy shapes, using a French vegetable cutter. Arrange the pieces of endive through the beet rings. Place on crisp lettuce leaves, allowing two leaves, two bunches of endive and four fancy shapes for each portion. Serve with Dixon salad dressing.

Dixon Salad Dressing

One-half cup mayonnaise dressing.
One teaspoon powdered sugar.
One tablespoon tomato puree.
Few drops Worcestershire sauce.
Cayenne.

Add the tomato puree to the mayonnaise dressing and mix thoroughly; then add the lemon juice, powdered sugar, Worcester shire sauce and cayenne.

To make the tomato puree, drain one-half can of tomatoes, put in saucepan, bring to the boiling point, and let simmer until reduced to half its original quantity. Put it through a fine strainer, return to the saucepan, and let simmer until it is of thick consistency.

MRS. N. L. McDOWELL,
Box 85, R. F. D.,
New Alexandria.
VIENNESE ANGEL TORTE

One tablespoon sugar.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
Six tablespoons melted butter.
Three tablespoons water.
Raspberry jam.
Four egg whites.
One-half cup powdered sugar.
One-half teaspoon almond extract.
One-half cup chopped almonds.

Combine the cracker crumbs with the sugar, salt, melted butter and water. Press a thin layer into an oiled shallow pan and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees F.) for eight minutes, or until firm and light brown. Cool and spread the bottom with raspberry jam. Cover with a meringue made by beating the egg whites stiff, and combine with the powdered sugar, almond extract and chopped almonds. Return to a slow oven (325 degrees F.) and continue baking until the meringue is golden brown (about 15 minutes).

MRS. R. M. BAKER,
Foxburg.
BAKED HAM TORADO

Place ham on rack in roasting pan with one pint of cold water, and roast in a slow oven (325). Baste frequently with one quart milk using a little at a time. Roast about 24 minutes per pound for a 10 or 12 pound ham, or until tender. Take ham from oven and remove the skin. Pour caramel syrup over it, return to the oven and brown.

Caramel Syrup

Brown slightly one cup of sugar, adding one-half cup boiling water and boil gently until smooth. Cut up four marshmallows and add, stirring constantly until a thin syrup is formed. Then add one-half cup well drained, crushed pineapple and one-fourth teaspoon ground cloves. Cool syrup before pouring over ham. With ham, serve asparagus tips and dressing made by adding horseradish to stiffly beaten cream until flavor is tart. Color with paprika. Serve heaped asparagus on crisp lettuce leaves. Garnish with parsley and turnipped daisies.

MRS. WILLIAM S. HADDOCK,
2728 Miles avenue, Dormont.
INDIVIDUAL MERINGUES WITH FROZEN CARAMEL FILLING

Whip four egg whites until stiff, add one-quarter teaspoon cream of tartar. Add one cup sugar slowly (one spoonful at a time) and one teaspoon vanilla. Beat the mixture 20 minutes and bake for one hour in oven heated just under 250 degrees.

Frozen Caramel Filling

Brown half cup granulated sugar over a low fire. When melted and fire is out add half cup boiling water. Cool before adding two egg yolks, a pinch salt and two tablespoons brown sugar. Cook slowly until thick. After this is cold add half pint of cream, whipped. Freeze in refrigerator tray at least three hours. One cup of nuts is an excellent addition to the above.

Filling may be varied. Sometimes it is most convenient to use bought ice cream or a remnant of fruit and a little whipped cream. Serves 10.

MRS. PALMER J. SHOOK Fayette City.
PRUNE SOUFFLE

One-half pound dates.
One cup sugar.
Three egg whites.
One and one-half teaspoon baking powder.

Cook prunes until soft, remove seeds and cut into bits. Remove seeds from dates and cut into small pieces. Add baking powder to sugar and mix with prunes and dates. Beat whites of eggs until very stiff and fold into the prune mixture. Put into baking dish. Bake one-half hour in a slow oven in a pan containing one and one-half inches of boiling water.

Custard Sauce

Two cups milk.
Three egg yolks.
Three tablespoons sugar.
Two teaspoons vanilla.
Pinch of salt.

Scald milk. Beat egg yolk until lemon colored. Add heated milk to egg yolks. Add sugar and salt, and mix well. Return mixture to double boiler and cook until it coats the spoon. Remove from fire and add vanilla.

Chill souffle and custard before serving.

Honorable Mention

MRS. H. A. LIGHTHART,
504 Jacksonia street, North Side.
PRUNELLA CAKE

One-half cup shortening.
One cup sugar.
Two eggs.
Two-thirds cup sour milk.
One and one-third cups flour.
Two-thirds cup stewed prunes.

Blend shortening with sugar and eggs. Add chopped prunes. Stir in milk. Add sifted dry ingredients. Pour into buttered layer pans. Bake in moderate oven about 25 minutes. Cool. Serve with whipped cream or creamy icing.

Creamy Icing

Mix two cups confectioner's sugar, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one-eighth teaspoon salt. Combine half with two tablespoons shortening. Add remaining sugar, two tablespoons prune juice and one tablespoon lemon juice. Beat until creamy.

MRS. CECELIA T. DONAHOE,
1614 Second street, McKees Rocks.
GINGERBREAD WITH LEMON SAUCE AND CHEESE
GINGERBREAD

One-half cup shortening.
Two tablespoons sugar.
One egg.
One cup dark molasses.
Two and one-fourth cups flour.
One teaspoon soda.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One teaspoon ginger.
One teaspoon cinnamon.
One cup boiling water.

Cream shortening and add the sugar, one tablespoon at a time. Add the well-beaten egg and the molasses. Sift flour once before measuring. Sift flour, soda, salt, ginger and cinnamon together, add alternately with the boiling water and mix well. Pour into a deep pan lined with greased paper and bake 45 minutes at 325 degrees F. Size of pan, eight inches square.

LEMON SAUCE AND CHEESE

Soften a package of white cream cheese with milk until easy to spread. Cut squares of the gingerbread. Split each square. Spread bottom half with soft cheese. Put back upper half. Place dab of cheese on top and pour lemon sauce over the same. A little extra grated lemon or orange rind may be sprinkled on the top to color.

LEMON SAUCE

One-half cup sugar.
Two tablespoons cornstarch.
Four tablespoons cold water.
One cup boiling water.
One tablespoon butter.
One egg.
One-eighth teaspoon salt.
One-eighth teaspoon nutmeg.

Combine sugar and cornstarch. Add cold water. Pour boiling water over mixture. Add butter. Cook in double boiler until thick—about 15 minutes. Pour hot sauce over well-beaten egg. Add salt, nutmeg, lemon juice and rind. Beat well. Serve hot on gingerbread.

MOUNTAIN WHITE

Dissolve a packet of gelatine (one tablespoonful) in a half cup of cold water. Fill the cup with boiling water. While this cools, beat four egg whites to firmness in a large bowl. Fold in gradually one cup granulated sugar. Then stir in, by spoonfuls, the dissolved gelatine and water. Add one teaspoon vanilla. Beat mixture until thick. Add nuts, broken pieces of milk chocolate, cut marshmallows and bits of fruits strained of their juices (fruit juices often counteract gelatin, especially pineapple juice). Spoon out into a deep oblong dish lightly buttered. Allow to stand over night, or at least six or eight hours, in the refrigerator. Turn out whole on a platter and slice. Top with whipped cream, flavored and sweetened, or with a little thick chocolate sauce. Variations of fillings can be used.

LUNCHEON CORN

Blend one teaspoon butter with two tablespoons flour. Add one cup milk and stir constantly until smooth. Add to this one can golden bantam corn, two well beaten egg yolks, a few grains pepper, one and one-quarter teaspoon salt. Fold in the two well-beaten egg whites. Put in buttered casserole and bake in moderate oven about 30 minutes, or until firm.

PLUM MARMALADE.

Remove skins of one orange and one lemon, peeling moderately thin, leaving as much of the white part of the fruit as possible. Grind skin in food chopper. Add one-half cup water and one-eighth teaspoon soda. Bring to boil. Cover and simmer 10 minutes. Cut off the white skins of peeled orange and lemon with a sharp knife and slip out the pulp of each section. Add pulp and juice to cooked rind. Next pit and grind or chop one and one-half pounds fully ripe plums. Combine with orange mixture. Measure five cups sugar into a large kettle. Add prepared fruit, filling up the last cup with plums to make three cups. Mix well and bring to a full rolling boil over the hottest fire. Pour into sterilized glasses and seal.

LACK OF LOW-COST WATER GATEWAY PERILS DISTRICT

Canal to Lake Erie Urged to Halt Mill Losses

(Editor's Note—This is the second of a series of articles on the Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal.)

Pittsburgh has been slipping industrially for more than 10 years, say outstanding business leaders.

Can she regain and hold her supremacy?

She can if she wakes up, say her canal critics.

Pittsburgh has the same geographical advantages she had in 1751 when George Washington commented on her strategic position as the location for a fort. She lies at the junction of three rivers.

They have saved her in the westward spread of empire.

But her advantages are passing. Her supremacy is threatened, doomed, unless she achieves a low-cost gateway to the lakes and the sea.

"Oh, that's just a pet of the steel and coal companies!"

Well, they haven't been asleep, at least. They're using the rivers. It's a good thing they have—for they've staved off disaster for every man, woman and child in this district by overcoming economic obstacles, canal advocates say.

More tonnage is hauled on the Monongahela River than on any other navigable stream in the United States. From 25 to 30 million tons a year. The government's engineering work on the Allegheny has made it navigable for great distances. And the Ohio is navigabe the year 'round for 980 miles.

But it has taken more than 100 years to develop waterways here to their present stage—and Pittsburgh still is at a "dead end" so far as the national system of inland waterways goes.

She cannot get to the lake ports except by rail. She has the coal—reserves enough to last 1,500 years. But she is at a disadvantage as to ore and the limstone used for fluxing in making iron.

rich ore fields of the Northwest will be exhausted. Far-sighted men are already investigating Brazilian ore fields.

But when that time comes, unless Pittsburgh and Youngstown can reach the lakes and get these foreign ores as cheaply as competing centers, they will be fifth-rate powers in steel.

Youngstown's problem is worse, for it doesn't have the river. She will have to have an outlet.

Present-day difficulties and ultimate disaster have been predicted for many years. But it has taken time to arouse public opinion, and there have been controversies and disputes to hold up action.

Water highways are under control of Congress, and all improvements are made under direction of the War Department's Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors.

Over many years the engineers reported adversely as to the economic wisdom of the Lake Erie Canal.

Their approval last Wednesday of the 102-mile route known as the Beaver-Mahoning survey, was the first break in favor of the idea in a long time.

They agree that the canal can be built and that it can attract enough low-cost tonnage to liquidate the cost.

It remains to be seen whether Public Works Administration funds can be obtained to put the project through now, at a time when costs are low and other states are receiving the impetus of gigantic construction jobs.

The Private Papers of a Repotter

This is drama, indeed . . . Shortly before Marie Dressler went to the hospital—she ordered her first mink coat . . . It was made to order and cost her $6,000 . . . It was the first mink coat in her life—and she was able to buy it when she was past 60 . . . What a thrill for Marie . . . A few weeks ago—before the coma set in—the coat arrived . . . It was delivered to her as she lay in her bed . . . The nurses lifted it high, for her to see it . . . "Oh, let me wear it—just once?" she pleaded . . . Of course this was out of the question . . . "Later," they told her, "when you are better" . . . Marie persuaded them to put it on her bed—as a cover—so she could stroke its fur and fondle it . . . This was done . . . Poor thing . . . Then, one afternoon, when the nurses had left the room, Marie got up, weak and lame . . . And she put it on and admired it in the mirror . . . She had wanted such a luxury all her life . . . One of her very own, that is . . . She had worn them so often in movies . . . And always had to give them back, you see . . . When the nurses returned—they found Marie in the coat—in a faint.

Overheard: Hollywood is a paradise for home town failures . . . Caustic criticism of a concert singer: "She's got a small voice—but it's rotten!" The management of the highly successful production: "The Drunkard" must be having a healthy howl . . . After the revival had prospered for months—it drew its first notice from a leading theatrical gazette . . . Suggested for A. Woollcott's collection of unusual names: Henry Fractious lives in Los Angeles . . . One of the girls in the Cantor flicker was dropped suddenly . . . When it was learned that she was not yet 18 . . . Girls under that age on the Coast—who work—must have a teacher supplied by the studio . . . The under-18 lassies are not allowed by law to work later than 10 p. m., too . . . So she was fired . . . M-G-M's big sign near the studio exclaims: "More stars than there are in heaven!" . . . Izzatso? . . . Add thumbnail descriptions: Kate Smith: Around the world with knife and fork!

The California movie audiences have a sense of humor, at that . . . In "Thin Man" when Bill Powell is asked: "What d'you know?" his retort is: "Don't know a thing—I've been in California for four years!" . . . An audience last night viewing it — responded with a deafening and prolonged laugh—followed by applause . . . When the eye is confronted with Shirley Temple's billing in front of the Rita Theater here—it blinks for a minute . . . The billing for Shirley, only five years old, is five feet nigh letters and in smaller letters is "Little Miss Marker" . . . Still smaller, however, below Shirley's name is Garbo's and "Queen Christina" . . . Very funny to me . . . Mae Clarke, who is ill, found time recently when alone in her ailing room to telephone various newspaper people to say that she was preparing a magazine article about the accident that killed Dr. Wagner and Dorothy Dell . . . She wanted a retraction from this column because it had reported that Dr. Wagner (shortly before the accident) had taken one hour and 20 minutes to drive to a place that for any other driver would be three hours . . . Miss Clarke also stated that she could prove Miss Dell was driving at the time of the crash . . . Miss Dell couldn't drive.

Maxie Rosenbloom, the prizefighter, got himself some shady decisions in California fighting with Lee Ramage . . . Even the sports writers groaned about the decision the other night, as did many of the spectators . . . After the fight as some of the audience came out — motorists in a slowly passing car queried: "Who won the fight?" . . . "Rosenbloom!" someone yelled back . . . "I know," was the retort beautiful, "but who got the decision?" . . . That sums up the reputations of some of the local referees . . . California, you know, gets its verdicts from the referees — there are no judges . . . It reminds me of an amusing squelch of last year . . . A referee who picked up the arm of the nearest fighter to him one night (that's how they usually select the winners) walked into a Brown Derby after the fights . . . He paused near a booth where sat Groucho Marx and others, who were still complaining of his decision . . . "Hello," the referee said, "did you see the fight?" . . . "Yeah," mumbled Groucho, "did you?"

Charlie Hughes, of the Detroit Athletic Club, relays this on a movie executive . . . At a story conference he was explaining a scene in which the rain leaked through the roof onto the face of a dead man . . . "Down from the ceiling," he was dramatically saying, "on the dead man's face we see the rain come trifling down!" . . . The others went crazy trying to suppress their laughter . . . The executive sensed something wrong and glaring savagely at them he yelled: "Yes, I said trifling!"

Talk about things to burn you up and knock you cold—it has just come to my attention that in New York a dozen orphans may be used as guinea pigs for experiments with a new infantile paralysis serum! . . . It is known as "monkey fluid" . . . The courts were urged to give permission . . . Because they have no parents to give or withhold consent . . . There are some people who really believe that it is perfectly fine to make such experiments on these helpless orphans . . . It is nice of them to risk the lives of other people's children . . . How about risking the lives of their own tots? . . . This pains me much—and the mothers and fathers who read this here certainly can help considerably to prevent it . . . It is supposed to have been proven safe for adults, but they must make certain about children . . . I object to the experiment . . . Because a doctor on the Coast the other day was very sure about such a serum . . . So sure was he, he experimented on his own child . . . And it died immediately! . . . Parents and others can try to prevent this happening to these six orphan boys and girls by urging the Governor of New York to stop it!

Fields Film Triumph In Penn

By KARL KRUG

"And, don't forget, folks, tomorrow night, 'East Lynne.'"

What a grand film it is—this "The Old Fashioned Way," which with the incomparable W. C. Fields trouping high, wide and handsome as The Great McGonigle, swept yesterday's Penn audiences into convulsive laughter as it went back to the tank town theatrical circuits of the nineties for its fun and frolic.

In a moth-eaten great coat, fur collar and topper, Fields is given the finest opportunity the screen has yet afforded his brilliant talent in this hilarious tale of a troupe of barnstorming hams whose chief stock in trade is a performance of "The Drunkard," reigning melodramatic hit of the gas-light decade. The picture has been happily titled and Fields happily cast, the sum and substance of the whole being a photoplay of rare nonsense and sheer delight.

As the hamish old tragedian who leads his sheriff-dodging, landlady-ducking company from town to town in search for fame—and food, Fields is in his element.

RIVALS CHAPLIN COMEDY

After a more or less mild start, the McGonigle troupe reaches Bellefontaine, the Ohio village I presume, where the company puts up at the Wendelschaffer boarding house. It is here that Baby LeRoy, somewhat grown up since "A Bedtime Story," is brought into the proceedings for a goofy scene in which Fields gets the worst of it at the dining table, the great McGonigle getting even a few minutes later with a well-placed kick to the seat of the LeRoy rompers. Then Miss Jan Duggan, a sterling character actress, playing Cleopatra Pepperday, an affected lady with theatrical ambitions, corners Fields and makes him listen to her sing "Sea Shells." The result is a scene of comical proportions that has never been bettered by even the great Chaplin.

There's a pretty little romance between Judith Allen, as Fields' daughter, and Joe Morrison, a tenor of sterling quality, who first introduced "The Last Round-Up," and he accounts for a capable performance in this, his screen debut.

SURE-FIRE HUMOR

Played through with one eye on Fields and the other on situations to enhance his laugh-pulling ability, "The Old Fashioned Way" is sure-fire humor, with a dash or two of sentiment that never for a moment thinks of growing maudlin. That is probably the reason, next to the Fields buffoonery, that it is so thoroughly enjoyable.

It is the goofy Gaudsmiths and their two dogs, almost as good comedians as their masters, who walk away with the stage show offered by Vincent Lopez. That is, they walk away with it after Fred Lowry, the blind whistler from Texas, has done his whistling and the Saxon sisters have done their singing. Here are three smart and unusual turns for any movie house stage act. Lowry, especially, will enchant you when those notes come from down in his throat.

The Saxon sisters' vocalizing is exotically exuberant; Florence and Alvarez are ballroom dancers, whose turn becomes quite sensuous as it reaches it latter stages, and Edna Sedgwick is a toe dancer of becoming grace and speed. Prof. Lopez offers an interlude on the piano after his own masterful fashion, and his boys play "All I Do Is Dream of You" with a rhythm the like of which you've never heard before.

HOLLYWOOD, July 21.—Hello! In this daily grind of finding out things (let's hope they are interesting) about the movie folk, it is sort of an added thrill (and always will be) to learn that an extra girl has clicked. It renews old hopes, breaks traditions or what have you.

An "Unknown Makes Good"—There isn't any finer headline! There isn't any bigger excitement in the movie village. The denizens of the strange celluloid city love it!

Victoria Vinton is the latest to grace the lists of those to climb that slippery ladder to featured roles—a rise that few go above to greater things, but there is always that chance. Anyway, Victoria's been boosted by Jack Warner and Hal Wallis, production boss, to a nice spot in "Gentlemen Are Born," the new Dick Powell and Josephine Hutchinson flicker, which Mervyn Leroy is directing at the Warner plant.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Grins and Bitters

A FAMOUS Broadwayite, liked by everyone who knows him, is one of those chaps who will not take money matters seriously. All his life he has been up and down the financial ladder. When he has money he's one of the best spenders in town. And when he hasn't money, he's still one of the best spenders we have.

Of course, spending money when you haven't got it is a rather perilous business. But this gentleman doesn't mind. He's sure a big package will pop up somewhere. And it generally does.

It is the hotels in which he resides that go daffy trying to keep up with him. He has lived in several of New York's finest hotels, and all of them have had the same nerve-wracking experience. The reason is simple.

When he is in possession of money, our friend is the best customer in the establishment. He tosses lavish parties, giving all the business to the hotel—and pays his bills on the dot. But when money is scarce, he gives the same parties—and doesn't pay his bills at all.

Before the hotel quite realizes what has happened, the Broadwayite is into it for $3,000 or $4,000. Then they can't put him out. Rather than lose this large sum, they permit him to charge more and more. They know that, if he hits on a proposition, he'll pay up immediately. But the weeks usually drag along until the management is on the verge of insanity.

A few weeks ago, a little chorine called upon our friend at his hotel. Sitting with him in his lavish suite, she poured out a very sad tale. She was living in the Hotel P——, she said, and her week's bill had been more than anticipated. Now there was trouble.

"I told them that I'd written home," she sobbed, "and that I'd have plenty of money in a day or two. But they won't listen to me.

"They've locked me out of my room, and they're holding my trunks. And that isn't all. The manager told me this morning that, unless I paid by tonight, he'd see that I went to jail."

The Broadwayite was furious.

"The Hotel P—— is supposed to be one of the best hotels in New York," he cried. "They have no right to act that way with a kid like you. I'm sore, good and sore. And by golly, I'm going to get even with them.

"Yes, kiddie, don't you worry. I'll show them what trouble means. I'll make them wish they had never done this to you."

The girl's eyes were wide.

"But how?" she asked. "How will you do it?"

The Broadwayite pounded his fists.

Big Strike on Screen

Spectacular scenes of the strike situation in San Francisco and the efforts of the government to bring about its end are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. Gen. Hugh Johnson speaks. The Globe Trotter describes the strike conditions.

Highlights of the career of the great dirigible, Los Angeles, recently condemned as unsafe by the naval experts are pictured. She is shown in battle maneuvers, at her hangar in Lakehurst, N. J., where she will be kept for experimental purposes, and on her last flight over New York skyscrapers.

Note—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange programs in time schedules it is possible that some subjects in Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.

O'Brien and Cagney In Navy Film

By MICHAEL SHAW

"Here Comes the Navy," the new Stanley attraction, is a spectacular comedy enlisting the services of Pat O'Brien, James Cagney, Frank McHugh, Gloria Stuart and quite a large portion of the United States fleet.

The plot is pretty much the same as the one that Victor McLaglan and Edmund Lowe used in picture after picture, but it provides made-to-order parts for Mr. O'Brien and Mr. Cagney, and it is undeniably amusing, particularly when our own Mr. McHugh holds the center of the stage.

Mr. Cagney is first seen as a riveter, tough and fresh, who conceives an extraordinary dislike for Mr. O'Brien, chief petty officer of the U. S. S. Arizona. Mr. O'Brien reciprocates, and soon the two get into a fist fight at the riveters' ball. Mr. Cagney, knocked out, joins the Navy in the hope of catching up with his enemy and squaring accounts.

He despises the service as much as he does Mr. O'Brien, and when he makes his feelings public he is ostracized by all his shipmates except Mr. McHugh. He trifles with the idea of deserting, but is talked out of it by Miss Stuart, a girl he meets while "the fleet's in."

His cup of sorrow is filled to overflowing when he learns that Miss Stuart is the sister of Mr. O'Brien, with whom he has continued to tangle, afloat and ashore.

Heroism in a gun turret fire brings Mr. Cagney a medal, but the cynical seaman is unappeased. At his own request, he is transferred to the dirigible Macon. When Mr. O'Brien, as one of a ground crew trying to land the airship, is carried high into the air on the end of a rope, Mr. Cagney saves him, and it all ends in a slapstick wedding ceremony.

Mr. O'Brien is impressively at home in his role; he looks and acts like a naval man. Mr. Cagney is provided with his usual supply of wisecracks and opportunities for curling his lip and talking out of the corner of his mouth.

Miss Stuart is simply wasted in a small and not very convincing part, but Mr. McHugh has his best chance to date of putting across his own particular brand of comedy, and he scores nothing short of a triumph.

The Navy co-operated in the filming of the picture, and there are highly interesting scenes of life at a training station and aboard ship, of ceremonials and target practice, and of lighter-than-air activities.

Carlone Orchestra Stays in Park

Freddie Carlone and his orchestra, playing for dancers at Kennywood, have been engaged for another week at the open air dance pavilion. Perry Como, baritone, sings with this orchestra, which also has a girl vocalist, Sonnett Muni. Carlone's orchestra will give free concerts tomorrow in the Kennywood bandstand. Bobby Fisher's Fearless Fliers, performers on the flying trapeze, end their engagement tonight.

Lombroso Is Becoming Known

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Who is Lombroso? Since my review of the Molnar play, "The Lawyer," has been printed, half a dozen people have written or called up to ask that question, and a few have volunteered to enlighten me. So I have to confess that he is no stranger, as I pretended, but that his book on "Criminal Man" has furnished me many valuable pointers, and when I was in Verona, Italy, I visited not only Juliet's tomb, but Lombroso's old home.

Mr. Seibel

Lombroso is the Einstein of criminology. The best joke in Molnar's play, "The Lawyer," is that his criminal is raising a fund for a monument to Lombroso. But the joke is entirely lost because no one any longer knows who Lombroso was.

That farce of Molnar's at the Arnold School should have gone through a process of adaptation before it was presented to an American audience. Nearly every foreign play has to be treated that way, and American plays have to be adapted to foreign audiences. Many New York successes have to be revised for the provinces.

Sometimes a play has to be rewritten a few years after it is first produced. A play of mine, "The Leper," had a clergyman who was a baseball fan. On his study walls was a picture of Christy Matthewson, and the preacher talked about Hans Wagner. In cities of the rival league, Hans had to be changed to Ty Cobb. Today he would be changed to Babe Ruth. As for Christy Matthewson, he is almost as much forgotten as Cesare Lombroso.

Even Shakespeare often needs to be brought up to date. He had a little habit of giving digs of boots to his friends and neighbors, like "the fat ale-wife of Wincot" in the "Taming of the Shrew." Most of us don't even know where Wincot is. But don't write to tell me.

'My Own Story' :-: By Marie Dressler

'Face Like Mine Has Advantages,' Says Screen Star

CHAPTER XII.

A face like mine has tremendous advantages. I don't have to park it in a cold cream jar; I don't have to spend two hours nightly ironing out the day's wear and tear. If I worried as much about my face as some folks do, I bet I could get the prize as Miss Coney Island. I used to cry as a little girl when I realized that I wasn't pretty like my sister and other children. It really hurt. Then I began to find that I could do many things that the beautiful ones could not do.

I have learned since to be sorry for beautiful women—yes, really. You see we all start in life with some personality, but when we don't use it, it goes. The creature who is good to look upon makes people so happy just to be near her that they wait on her and spoil her and soon the personality goes, leaving nothing behind. I saw the beautiful Langtry once at a gambling table in Monte Carlo and, believe me, I was glad I had a rubber face that was still an asset. Langtry's beauty was gone, her face was vapid, expressionless, inert.

Personality Aids Beauty

There are, of course, exceptions. Lillian Russell, on the other hand, was always beautiful, because her nature was generous and lacking in ego. Her personality ripened and developed and enhanced her beauty, which otherwise would have withered.

As a matter of fact, I have no idea what I really look like. With an acrobatic face like mine, I never look twice alike either in a photograph or in a part. If a chamelion were asked for its picture it would not know whether to give its admirer one of the pink or plaid photos. I am in the same fix. When I'm asked for a photograph I wonder whether I shall send myself as a queen or a derelict. Caught short of queens, I send Marthie.

Another question is, "Do I like animals?" Sure, I can make elephants do things that nobody else can make them do. Elephants understand me and I understand elephants. I've owned every breed of dog and even parrots. At present I have no animals, but I'm scared to death for fear I shall fall for something.

Some day my sales resistance may be low and I'll walk home with a giraffe, but in the meantime I avert my eyes when I pass pet stores. I think that every house on the ground floor should have a dog, a cat and a parrot—the dog to keep burglars away, the cat to keep mice away, and the parrot to keep callers away.

A car? Yes, I have two, but there is no use rousing you by telling you their makes. An auto is the same as your religion. The one you understand best is the one you like.

What do I read? Histories and biographies chiefly. I like to know about the people who messed up the world for us. I get a great kick out of French history. I read it and read it. By the end of a page I've killed off a family. At the end of a chapter a city is gone. It's as good as fly swatting when your nerves are on edge and you want to commit murder.

My vacations? I spend them abroad, because every time I come home I like to find how much my own country has improved. Yes, I am able to afford vacations again. I have climbed off the Burning Deck into a house with a garden, my name again gleams in front of theaters from Maine to California and greets all my friends when they cross to the other side of the Atlantic.

How to Make Good

What is my suggestion for making good? Don't expect to succeed over night and be assured that if you do, the result may be lasting. Don't get the idea that the world owes you a living.

Love of Animals So Strong She Shuns Pet Shops

You owe the world something and if you make good you can collect. Keep trying, keep smiling, and never forget that there is no part too small to play and to play well—and there's no age limit.

Never be jealous of the man higher up—the star of your organization—your bit can stand out, too, and may lead to something better.

Many people in all walks of life work industriously in small parts for a certain length of time without murmuring and then because they are not noticed when they feel the reward is due they kick over the traces just as they are spotted for promotion. Then they lose out entirely and blame their plight on bad luck, woofing that the world is against them, when in reality they simply aren't stickers.

Whale bait is courage, hard work, friendliness, cooperation and patience. With these the whale will ultimately land at your feet. My whale has been washed up at last and with your help I am now eating him.

In Mayfair --With-- Patricia Pitt

Today brings two weddings to interest Pittsburghers, one taking place out-of-town and one here.

The out-of-town bride will be Elizabeth Burd Reed, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Edward Bliss Reed, of Yale University, and a granddaughter of Mrs. William Reed Thompson, of Pittsburgh.

She'll marry Borden Helmer, son of Mrs. Fielding Taylor Lewis, of New York, this afternoon in the Dwight Memorial Chapel at Yale, with only the families attending. A reception in the New Haven Lawn Club will follow.

The bride, who will be given in marriage by her father, will appear in the bridal procession in a white satin gown made in princess style with a lace veil. She will carry white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mary Bliss Reed, who has often visited in Pittsburgh, will be her sister's maid of honor, and Anne Parmelee Reed, another sister; Mrs. Louis B. McCagg, Jr., of New York, and Mary Treat Nettleton, of New Haven, will be bridesmaids.

The maid of honor will wear yellow organza with a large hat to match. The bridesmaids will appear in blue organza with matching large hats. They will carry larkspur and lilies of the valley.

Hamilton A. Long, of New York, will be best man. Seymour Wadsworth, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Francis T. Willis, of Richmond, Va.; Charles H. Durham, Jr., George F. Hasslacher, G. Barrymore Glayve and Dudley Nostrand, all of New York, will be ushers.

After October 15 Mr. Helmer and his bride will be at home in East Eighty-fourth street, New York.

The bride is a Westover School and Vassar College girl, and is a member of the Junior League and the Colonial Dames. Mr. Helmer went to Dartmouth College and the Harvard Business School. He's a member of the Harvard Amateur Ski Club, and a former member of Squadron A.

Mrs. William Reed Thompson is in New Haven for her granddaughter's wedding, and so is Mrs. Thompson's daughter, Miss Dorothea Thompson.

Frances Heckert Bride Today

There was a wedding of note here at home today, too, that of pretty brunette Frances Heckert, daughter of the Sidney Frederick Heckerts, of South Highland avenue, and Raleigh Russell Huggins, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. R. R. Huggins, of Colonial place.

The ceremony took place today at noon in the Heckert home. The bride chose a peach chiffon gown with a matching long-sleeved jacket of net and a wide-brimmed peach horsehair braid hat. She carried garden flowers.

Mrs. George Dickson, her sister, as matron of honor, appeared in pale blue chiffon with a matching horsehair hat. Barbara Buehler, of New York, as maid of honor, was in foam-green chiffon with a matching hat of horsehair. Both carried garden flowers. James Campbell was best man.

The bride is a graduate of Mt. Vernon Seminary and of the drama department of Carnegie Institute of Technology. She also attended Madame Canalossy's School in Paris. Her fiance is a graduate of Shady Side Academy and of the University of Pittsburgh.

Ada Wardrop's Engagement Announced

Today brings news of an interesting bethrothal.

W. Miller Wardrop, of Sewickley, announces the engagement of his daughter, Ada B. Wardrop, to Hugh Rodney Sharp, Jr., son of the H. Rodney Sharps, of Wilmington, Del.

* * *

The Charles N. Lennoxes have a baby daughter—Nancy Lennox. She was born July 9. Mrs. Lennox is the former Christine Johnson, a daughter of the Hussey Burdell Johnsons, of Wilkins avenue.

L. Bradley, W. C. Short To Marry

The first formal wedding in years to be held in the historic Beulah Presbyterian Church, William Penn Highway, will be at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. The church is 150 years old and the bride's family have attended it for many years.

The bride will be Miss L. Blanche Bradley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Sommers, of the William Penn highway. She will marry William C. Short, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Short, of Darlington road.

The Rev. F. G. Dunning, pastor, will officiate before the altar which will be banked with white flowers, palms and ferns. The aisles will have markers of white satin ribbons.

Gown of Satin

The bride will wear a fitted gown of Duchess satin with touches of Irish point lace at the neckline and a veil of tulle and lace draped from a cap embroidered with seed pearls. She will carry a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her matron of honor, Mrs. Warren Low, will wear pink silk lace made with a Queen Anne collar, with white accessories and will carry pink roses.

The bridesmaids are all wearing gowns of lace and tulle. They include Miss Pearl Smyers, in peach with blue accessories; Miss Alverda Frazier, in blue lace with peach accessories; Mrs. Alexander Greer, in maize with green accessories, and Miss Mary Frazier, in delicate green with maize accessories. They will all carry roses and garden flowers.

Brother Best Man

The bride's mother is to wear brown and orange flowered chiffon with a brown felt hat and brown accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses. Mrs. Short, Sr., is to wear blue chiffon with white accessories and a corsage of pink roses. Helen Low and Dolores Bradley, of Cleveland, niece of the bride, will be flower girls and Myrtle Low will be ring bearer. They will wear green frocks.

Vincent Short will be his brother's best man and ushers will be Theodore Wilson, Irwin Short, Elmer Bradley, the bride's brother, Cleveland; Alexander Greer, Warren Low and, also from Cleveland, Basil D. Brown.

Mrs. Michael Quinn is to play the music and her son, Michael Quinn, Jr., will sing. The reception is to be held in the Sommers home and aides will be Mrs. Helen McConnell and Mrs. Alex Duff, Jr.

After an eastern trip Mr. Short, Jr., and his bride will be at home in South avenue, Wilkinsburg.

: GIRL IN THE FAMILY :

By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER XLI.

The very next afternoon a small thing happened that showed her that it wasn't going to be so very easy after all. Just after her lunch period she was waiting on a customer, a woman who taught music and often came to the store for exercise books and sheet music for her pupils, when a girl wandered into the department and began to pick out rolls for a player piano.

She laid several aside and Susan heard her ask Mr. Lesser to play them for her. "I can't stand that canned music," Susan's customer murmured to her with an almost angry shake of her head. "I hate it all."

"Still if you can't play the piano well it's nice to have a phonograph or a player piano," Susan replied, smiling. "I can play but not very well, and—"

She stopped and turned her head toward the corner where Mr. Lesser sat at one of the pianos. Something had begun to rattle at the door of her memory. She forgot that she was rolling up two velocity exercise books for her customer. She was back in the Center street house once more, standing with Allen in front of the grate fire late at night, and John was coming up the front walk whistling the tune that Mr. Lesser was playing, "By the Waters of Minnetonka." Once more Susan could hear the crackle of the coal fire and the tom-tom of the rain on the high plate glass windows. She could feel Allen's wet cheek pressed down against hers and his arms in their drenched sleeves, holding her close.

—Try not to listen to it. Try not to think of him—of his voice and his eyes and his quick smile—

Woman Sympathetic

Susan's hands relaxed and she let go of the music. She sank slowly down on a piano stool behind the counter and put her head down into her arms.

"I know. You're tired. It must be terrible to stand on your feet all day," she heard the woman say.

She looked up, tears stinging their way into her eyes. "It's just that piece of music. It reminded me of something," said Susan.

The woman nodded. "Yes. Music does things like that to me sometimes. I mean that it makes me want to cry about nothing at all," she explained. "But I'd rather be a little bit emotional like that than like some of these people who don't know whether they're listening to the Unfinished Symphony or the Maine Stein Song!—You go on and cry your head off. It'll do you good. I'll just leave my money here on the counter."

Ideal Wedding Day

Monday, the fifteenth day of June, the day of Sara Cullen's wedding, was just the sort of day that every bride ought to have. It was like a good omen. The sky was a lake of Chinese-enamel blue with swanlike white clouds sailing around in it, and in the Cullen's side yard the grass was like green velvet and all of the rose bushes and bridal wreath around the fence were in bloom. A red and white striped tent had been set up there, and Aunt Nell had hired two women to help her serve the supper which she had prepared for the 48 people who were to be seated at 12 little tables inside the tent.

This was the great day of Sara's life, but it was also a great one for Aunt Nell, although she had not mentioned the fact to any one. For more than 20 years she had taught and trained and prayed for Sara so that some day she could hand her over to a good man and a happy married life with the knowledge that she had done a good job well—and this was the day.

"I just hope that you and Mary will make good marriages, too, Susie," she remarked, opening the screen and leaning out of the window to see if the daisies on the outdoor altar were still fresh. "I really think," she went on, turning back into the room with a dreamy look in her usually bright snapping eyes, "that about the most beautiful thing on earth is a little family just starting out—finding their home and furnishing it and having children and going out riding on Sunday afternoons all crowded together in a little car and having a terrible time trying to pay the bills and—"

"And you'd better stop painting that sort of picture of married life, mother, or you'll have Sara deserting George at the altar," interrupted Mary with a laugh. "We'd better get moving, Susie, you and I. There are Allen and John down in the yard already."

Long-Awaited Moment

Allen!

Susan felt as if her heart were stopping for a moment at the sound of his name. She knew suddenly that she had been waiting for weeks for this afternoon when she would see him at last. Counting on meeting him, talking to him.

"Yes, we'd better hurry," she murmured without knowing what she said.

"Well, I always notice how much more fun people in cheap little cars seem to be having than people in great big shiny limousines," said Aunt Nell over her shoulder as she left the room. "You keep your eyes peeled next time you're out driving, Mary, and you'll notice it yourself—Now hurry, girls."

The room was sweet with the scent of sachet and perfume and the flowers in Sara's bouquet.

"Believe me, darling, we are going to be knockouts in these Kate Greenaway things," said Mary with great satisfaction as she picked hers up from the day-bed. "You, particularly, in that dreamy blue."

Susan surveyed herself in the mirror, thinking how useless it was to look well when the man you cared for had stopped caring for you. When he thought that you were weak and cowardly and not particularly honest. . . She looked down into the yard where she could see the top of Allen's head beside the top of John's, and she remembered how he had been filled with anger and impatience that last night when she had left him standing beside Wallace's car in the snowy darkness of Center street. "Why don't you be honest with me, Susan?" he had asked her. The odd thing was that she always had been honest with him even if she had been slow and not very clever in her efforts to free herself from Wallace.

Water Under the Bridge

Oh, well, why agonize about it now? It was all water that had flowed under the bridge long ago.

She picked up her little round bouquet of flowers, tilted her lace hat over her right eye and started downstairs with Mary. They had dawdled so long over their dressing that as they reached the landing the music of the Lohengrin Wedding March, played on the living room piano by Miss Hester Buchanan Carr, who taught singing in the high school next door, burst forth and they hurried back to Sara to tell her that it was time for the wedding procession to start. Uncle Arthur came out of the Catch-All, crooked his arm for Mary's gloved hand, and they all started down the stairs.

When they reached the yard there was a row of small neighborhood children hanging over the picket fence, just as Aunt Nell had predicted there would be. They watched the proceedings with round-eyed and silent interest. Only once during the ceremony Susan heard one of the little girls say in a loud, clear voice, "That's my lady, the one in the blue dress." . . . Presently one of the colored waitresses came out of the back door and sent them all away.

Aunt Nell cried a little and Susan noticed that there was a sparkle of tears in Mary's green eyes as they all turned away from the altar at the end of the simple ceremony.

"What I most want to know," murmured Miss Hester Buchanan Carr, pushing her way toward Susan during the long, flat pause that followed, "is the name of the good looking man in the blue coat. I've seen him here lately, going in and out of the house. Is he a relative?"

Susan's eyes followed hers to the side porch, where Allen stood talking to Connie, who sat on the railing beside him.

Interested in Allen

"Why, that's Mr. Sholes," she said. "No, he's no relative of the Cullens', but he does live here."

"Well, he's a precious looking somebody," Miss Carr assured her, and began to sidle toward the porch through the crowd.

It was hot in the red and white tent during the wedding supper. Susan sat with the wedding party with her back to Allen, who had been captured by Miss Carr. It seemed a long time before they all got up from the little tables and drifted out into the side yard once more, carrying wedding cake in silver heart-shaped boxes. Miss Carr struck close to Allen. Presently Susan saw him leave her and disappear into the house.

Sara went upstairs to change, and came running down after a few minutes in her dark blue going-away suit. Holding fast to George's stout arm, she sped through a storm of rice and paper rose petals to the roadster that waited at the curb, decorated with old shoes and "Just Married" signs that Howard had painted upon its sides.

The sun went down and sweet damp earthly smells began to drift through the open windows of the house from the flower beds in the yard. People began to go away and Susan heard Miss Carr asking Aunt Nell where Allen was.

"Such a beautiful wedding! Never saw Sara look so lovely!" she said. "I've been wondering where Mr. Sholes is, I just wanted to say goodby to him. He's such an interesting somebody, isn't he?"

"He's just left," Susan heard her aunt reply. "My nephew and his wife came from Omaha for the wedding, and he's given up his room to them for a few days. You played the wedding march beautifully, Miss Carr, and we all thought it was so kind of you to offer to do it."

Bridge Playing Vanderbilt Hobby

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The hobbies of the notables of American society—they are many and varied.

With Harold Stirling Vanderbilt, the shyest of all Vanderbilts, yachting is a diversion—but contract bridge is his hobby.

The fact that his speedy enterprise won the great international yacht race three years ago thrilled this tall, modest and bespectacled descendant of the famous old "Commodore" Cornelius Vanderbilt.

But his joy was even greater when, two years later, his bridge team captured the Vanderbilt cup (which he had established) and his cognomen was placed on the most coveted trophy in the world of contract bridge.

He never mixes his bridge companions with his yachting cronies and it is a testimonial to his executive ability that he has managed to win international honors in both lines.

Those who know their society also know that "Mike" Vanderbilt, as a boy and a young man, had a far from happy existence.

Society meant nothing to him—and does not to this day. He was utterly miserable up in Newport, and it is an open secret that he never got on any too well with his late mother, the socially celebrated Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, who breathed her last some months ago.

Being of a quiet, retiring disposition, the pomp and luxury of his early life added to "Mike's" unhappiness, and when he went to Harvard, back in 1903, one of his chief pleasures was a game of cards with a few young friends of long standing.

Bridge interested him. But he soon realized the trick values of auction bridge needed some sort of a revision.

It was then he set about arranging a new system of scoring.

For weeks, months, years, he worked over his bridge problems.

There were many doubters—those who were not in sympathy with Vanderbilt's desire to modernize the game, and who scoffed at his theories.

Today he is known as the "father of contract bridge"—a title which speaks for itself.

And all over the world bridge fans play daily and nightly according to the rules set down by this younger son of the late William K. Vanderbilt.

Miss Herskovitz In Atlantic City

College President To Deliver Sermon

Dr. William Gear Spencer, president of Franklin College and vice president of the Northern Baptist Conference, will speak at the First Baptist Church, Bellefield avenue and Bayard street, tomorrow morning. He served as interim minister at the church prior to the installation of Dr. Bernard C. Clausen, present pastor.

Optometric Group Plans Outing

The Woman's Auxiliary to the Pittsburgh Optometric Association will meet at a basket picnic at Spreading Oak Grove, South Park, Thursday. There will be golfing and swimming preceding the supper at 6:30 o'clock, and dancing in the evening. Mrs. William Van Essen, president of the auxiliary, is chairman.

Barie Family Reunion at Wexford

The second annual reunion of the Barie family will be held at Wexford Grove tomorrow. Sports and dancing will be the attractions.

The Barie family is well known as one of the pioneer families of the North Side. More than 150 direct descendants of Peter and Theresa Barie will attend the reunion.

Johnson Placarded As 'Chiseler' By Pickets

WASHINGTON, July 21. — A certain incongruity exists in the roles being played at the moment by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator. In San Francisco, he is appearing, either by invitation or by intrusion, as mediator in the strike. As such, he is expected to maintain an impartial attitude between employers and employed, between companies and unions. While this is his status in San Francisco, in Washington he is being publicly denounced as a foe of unions and labor. As a result of the Donovan incident, the Department of Commerce Building, housing the NRA, is being picketed and, at the lunch hour and closing time, marchers walk around the building bearing placards reading:

"Chiseler No. 1, Johnson,"
"Johnson a Sell-out."

VOICES STILLED

Absence of the President from Washington and the usual summer doldrums have put an end for the time being to what, earlier in the season, was one of the capital's most flourishing industries. Before this lull set in, an activity with which politically-minded society people were busily occupied was trying to get another well known woman into the diplomatic service. The ice having been broken with the naming of Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen minister to Denmark, it was thought by promoters of women's rights and privileges that the example should be followed up.

Specifically, the friends of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman believed that she was just the person to fill the vacant post of minister to the

Boom for Women Diplomats Stilled By Vacations

Irish Free State. A campaign of "mentioning" her for the place, or saying that she was being considered for it was carried on for some time without any apparent substantial results. Then, the friends of other women prominent in Democratic or New Deal circles decided Mrs. Harriman was not the only one fitted to represent this country in Ireland, and they got busy with the same method. It was hinted that Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey, chairman of the Consumers Advisory Board of the NRA, had just as good chance as Mrs. Harriman. This kite flew for a while along with that of Mrs. Harriman. Then, as the President went away without doing anything about it, the strings broke or the kites were pulled in and the sky in that quarter is temporarily dull and lifeless.

RUSTIC REPARTEE

A young lady who attended the famous Tugwell hearing some weeks ago was considerably impressed with the fact that certain Senators considered Dr. Tugwell unfit for public office because he did not have enough mud on his boots.

The day after the hearing, a sudden heavy rainstorm drove the same young lady scurrying into a shop entrance. A moment later, she was joined by Dr. Tugwell, who was also seeking shelter from the storm.

"Seems to me," she replied as she recognized the handsome Brain Truster, "a little mud wouldn't do you any harm?"

Blush Held Attractive, Not Cause for Shame

"LOOK AT HER BLUSHING!"

And so LONESOME'S time is spoiled.

In fact, she refuses dates, and stays at home behind the closed door. And all because she is so worried and so much annoyed over this rush of blood to her cheeks . . .

Miss Brunot

Of course LONESOME is very young. Just in her 'teens, and yet tragedies like the one she mentions can cut an awful inroad into her peace of mind . . .

NOT ALONE

You're not alone, Lonesome . . . Many other girls and even boys have passed through the blushing stage . . . Some never overcome it. I remember once of seeing a very high official in a very big corporation blush, and it was such an all-round coloring up that even his ears and his neck were red . . . He couldn't help it. He, had always done this—it was second nature to him . . . But it hadn't stopped his upward climb. He had just hardened himself against those who made fun of him . . .

Personally, I think blushes are very attractive. It shows a certain impressionability . . . It indicates a tenderness of heart. An inward emotion that is YOUTH to its very core . . . It is a sign that you aren't so overly worldly . . . You aren't hardened to contact . . .

I wouldn't let those BLUSHES keep me indoors. . . I would just accept all the dates offered, and whenever that warmth of cheek occurred, I'd just take the GAFF given . . . in time, Lonesome, you may not color so easily. . . You may have to delve into the rouge pot to get any of the pink. . .

And then, you may long for the days of JUST NOW.

FALLS IN LOVE

Dear Miss Brunot:

I like the sincerity of your Speak Up, Sisters column. I am 19, and work for my father during the summer. I come from a well known family who treat me with the greatest respect and love me.

I met a young man about two months ago, whom I liked from the very first, and now I find I love him. I have never gone out with him, but when we are in each other's company, which is about once a month, he is so attentive that sometimes I begin to wonder. I don't want to be forward, because his sister goes with the crowd of girls I go with, and we belong to the same club.

It can't be that I am not popular because everyone tells my parents I have a most pleasing personality. I'm not grouchy. I smile through everything. Our family and his are very dear friends. Is there any way you could suggest to attract him more than I do?

He never fails to dance with me. Can you unravel this mystery, Miss Brunot?

LONELY HEART.

Your mystery is not such a difficult one to unravel . . . In fact it is solved in the first few lines . . . I feel the young man likes you very much . . . and since both his family and yours are liable to like your going with him, I am sure everything will come about nicely.

Why not invite him and his sister and some other young man to your home for an evening's entertainment. That would break the ice . . . Maybe he is waiting for you to make the first move . . . It wouldn't be very comfortable for him to be chasing you and getting turned down.

Girl Changes Mind

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a fellow 20 years of age. I go with a girl 18. We are going steady, and have been doing so for a year. I am very jealous of her, and ask her often if she loves me. And she says she does. We have argued a good deal, and I can't help asking her questions over and over again. It makes her tired for me to do this. We used to have a lot of good times together before I was working. And now that I am working, the arguing seems to be even oftener . . . Yet we are always right back together.

One night she said that if she were to go with other fellows and that if I should only go with other girls, we wouldn't get such grouches. I told her I had made my choice, and it was she.

I have asked her to become engaged. She said yes, and then changed her mind. Saying we were too young. And that we couldn't get married on what I am making. Yet she says she will marry me some day. But I can't get along without her.

Do you really think she loves me? B. C.

The girl's accepting your proposal, and then later of putting you off, indicates there was some other influence brought to bear upon her. Her people may think that you and she are too young and that you are not prosperous enough.

I really believe she cares for you, and why not stick to your job and try to get a promotion and better salary. You and she have plenty of time so far as age is concerned . . . Try and argue less . . . I fear you are suspicious in your jealousy of her . . . That never helps love along, brother.

The fact that you always make up, and quickly, does not indicate it will always be so . . . The day may come when she tires of continual squabbles.

Comfortable Tennis Party Frocks Have New Note of Chic

By PRUNELLA WOOD

BACKLESS wash dresses cut on sporting lines are about as comfortable as any uniform yet invented for summer, and if they come with a free swinging short jacket of matching or contrasting fabric they are just that much more useful. For anyone can put up with a light coat during shopping tours in town or to meet a train near the city if there is very little on beneath the garment, and in a jiffy the disguise can be removed to reveal a really negligee costume.

* * *

WASH SILKS seem to be sneaking nearer to first base after a year or so in which cotton was the only feminine love. Of them all, the washable satin seems to have taken the firmest hold on the imagination, and no wonder. For one can feel very well dressed in it and at the same time be ready for rougher fun or sport if it comes along, serene in the conviction of soap and water aid for repairs.

In white or ice blue or daybreak pink they are quite pretty enough for the informal evening at home or stepping out, and very stylish effects can be gotten for them by ensembling them with sandals of contrasting shade in linen or doeskin.

Uncrushable linen is another material much favored in this class of frocks. It is perfectly adaptable for active sports, and yet has some degree of formality intrinsically. There is a swell shade of pale raspberry in this fabric, a tint never seen in anything else that's washable.

* * *

CORDED SHEERS, waffle sheers and sheers that show a brocaded shiny stripe or dot motif in self color are many and varied. They weigh practically nothing, yet have enough body to tailor and hang well, so they are no end popular for the sports afternoon costume.

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Pink corded sheer, swell with a tan, makes this sports dress. The scarf is detachable; the wooden anchor clips dark brown. There is a brief, straight jacket.

You can wash this rough white chalk crepe which has a low square back and a scarf and belt of navy and white polka dotted silk.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Faulty Habits Effect Health

Chronic failure of elimination is an affliction of modern civilization. Often it can be traced to lack of exercise faulty living habits, bad posture, and improper food. A frequent factor and one that may be overlooked, is inflammation of the lower end of the intestine. It causes that part to be very sensitive and to escape pain or tearing of the tissues, the victim habitually postpones nature's call. In consequence, he soon acquires a habit of constipation.

Dr. Copeland

"Faulty habit formation in children is a common cause in early life. Unfortunately, once this bad habit is acquired, it persists throughout adult life. It may lead to digestive disturbances, to various constitutional disorders and even to permanently impaired health.

Constipation is usually associated with some disorder of the body. It should never be considered as a disease, but as a symptom or a sign of some disturbance. It is more prevalent among women and is a common affliction in persons beyond middle age.

I am frequently asked how to correct this trouble. First, may I warn you against the so-called "constipation medicines." They give only temporary relief, rarely if ever bringing about complete cure.

Include in your daily menu an adequate supply of fresh fruits and vegetables and partake of a well-balanced, nutritious diet. Such foods as prunes, apricots and figs are beneficial because of the natural laxative action they possess. Bran, rye and whole wheat may be substituted for white bread, but this is not always essential to relief.

A moderate amount of exercise, proper chewing of food, regular eating habits, an adequate number of hours of rest and relaxation, are essential to proper digestion and elimination. Drink at least six to eight glasses of water each day. Avoid those foods that are difficult to digest and which cause you digestive disturbances.

If constipation persists despite these simple rules, I would advise that you consult with your physician. It may be necessary to have X-ray examination and other laboratory tests to determine the underlying cause of the disorder.

Answers to Health Queries

C. S. Q.—Will you kindly tell me the cause of inflamed eyelids?

A.—This may be due to straining the eyes. Bathing the eyes with a solution of boric acid or applying 1 per cent yellow oxide of mercury to the eyelids may prove helpful. You should have your eyes tested.

Given in Marriage -:- A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Starts Back to Farm With Hugh

As I bent over Hugh, asking him if he could do something for me, I was furious at myself for the involuntary wish that Jim and the two little boys were out of sight and hearing.

It was not that I had any feeling of wrong or even of indecorum in what I was doing. The old saying "the end justifies the means" was surely applicable in this case, I told myself, even as I felt my cheeks flaming at the bright eyes of Junior and Roderick gleaming with childish curiosity, and at what my imagination interpreted as the carefully averted face of Jim.

For I knew two things; first, that Hugh might suffer serious injury to his wounded shoulder if he persisted in his determination not to be carried to the car of the Chinese which we were commandeering, and second, that only a personel appeal from me would have any chance of changing his decision.

The next instant I had no time to think of anything else save Hugh's reaction to my request. His eyes, which he had obstinately closed as he uttered his ultimatum about not being carried to the car, flew open at my appeal, and in them was look which always confuses me and makes me feel unaccountably remorseful.

HUGH IN PAIN

"You want me to do something for you?" he repeated, wonderingly, and I saw that his usually keen perceptions were so clouded by pain that for the moment he did not guess what I really wished. "You ought to know that I would do anything in the world for you."

I hastened to take advantage of both his assertion and his dulled perceptions.

"I do know it, and it makes me very happy," I told him in tones as low as his own. "So I am sure you will promise me that you will permit Jim and Bill to carry you to the car."

His eyebrows contracted into an involuntary frown, and I added hastily.

"Please don't object. It means so much."

He looked up at me with eyes suddenly insistent.

"Have you any idea how humiliating this experience will be?" he asked.

I made my own eyes stubborn.

"Only in your own mind." I said. "No one else could possibly think so. But that isn't the question. Will you do this —for me?"

He drew a deep breath, and stretched his uninjured hand out to me. There was nothing else for me to do save to take it, but I felt unutterably foolish as his hand clasped mine and he murmured faintly:

"I will do anything you say. Only, get it over with as quickly as possible."

His eyes closed again, and in sudden alarm I stooped and looked searchingly at him. Had he swooned again? No, his faint but steady breathing and the color of his face reassured me and, fearing to withdraw my hand lest he rouse too much, I gave hasty, low-toned directions to Jim and to Bill.

"Be all ready to make a cradle of your hands and carry him as soon as he stands up. He will put his good arm around one of your shoulders, and I will support him as best I can upon the wounded side. Junior! Roderick!"

ASKS BOYS' AID

"Yes, Mums! Yes, Auntie Madge!" Their young voices were eager and excited.

"Come over here and stand close to me, and when we start, keep so close to me that you can touch me if you take two steps forward and reach out your hands. That will give me plenty of room to take care of Uncle Hugh, but you won't be out of my reach. Will you remember and obey me?"

"Yes, sure thing!" they chorused.

"Very well. Jim, are those Chinese sufficiently bound to wait until someone comes for them?"

"Yes," was Jim's laconic reply.

"Then will you and Bill come here and help Maj. Grantland to stand up? But see that you don't keep him standing a second longer than it takes to get him on your hand cradle."

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

The people's choice for comfort and looks is the large hat. A good model is of white lacy linen with a large brim which fits over one eye and is bound in narrow black patent leather. The leather also makes a band on the crown, and there is a cluster of white linen flowers with black and green patent leather leaves.

Look after your garden and look charming while weeding and raking. Wear a big sunbonnet that dips down far over the neck when bending forward. It is of unbleached muslin with an applique of bright flowers. There is a matching cover-all apron and a pair of gloves with long matching cuffs to keep arms from scratches.

Contract Bridge »« HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Beautiful Plays

Whether or not North and South should reach a contract of six hearts on the hand below is decidedly open to question. It is true that they have first round control of every suit, but it is equally true that their combined hands contain only a single King and that South's somewhat attenuated trump holding finds only the most indifferent support in the hand of his partner. I do not believe that any good Bridge players would reach this contract—if they did, on this particular hand they would not deserve such a classification. However, the play of the hand is so interesting that I give it without even attempting to disclose the manner in which the contract was reached. I think it only fair to state that the play appears to me entirely "double-dummy."

North, Dealer.

	North
	♠ A J 9 2 ♡ 10 2 ♢ A 10 9 5 3 ♣ A 4
West ♠ K 10 6 4 ♡ 9 3 ♢ 8 7 ♣ Q J 10 8 5		East ♠ 8 7 5 ♡ K 7 6 5 ♢ K Q 6 4 2 ♣ 6
	South ♠ Q 3 ♡ A Q J 8 4 ♢ J ♣ K 9 7 3 2

Against South's contract of six hearts West opens with the Queen of clubs. North wins with the club Ace and leads the heart deuce South finessing the Jack when East plays low. The spade Queen is led next. West's best defense being to duck. A small spade is now led, and Dummy wins and plays the heart Ten. At this point East may choose either of two lines of defense.

If East puts up the heart King, South must win and lead out all of his trumps. West's last five cards are two spades and three clubs, but when South leads a diamond to the Ace a club must be released (since otherwise both of North's spades will make). Now the King of clubs is taken and West is put in the lead with an other club, whereupon he must lead into the spade tenace.

If East ducks the heart Ten, South must drop the eight! Now, on the Ace of spades South discards the diamond Jack, after which the diamond Ten is led. East should cover, and South must trump with the heart Queen. The Ace and four of hearts are next played (North discarding low diamonds) and when East wins the last heart he must yield North two diamond tricks, the second of which squeezes West in the two black suits.

The hand has still other variations, but not so difficult. It was submitted to me by several people.

LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS

HOOKED RUG PATTERN 773

There is something cool-looking about water lillies, that makes them a refreshing design to work on when the weather is hot. This design, which can be made in any size or shape, is equally appropriate in the bedroom or bathroom. It can be done in rags, hooked rug wool or candlewicking cotton. The body of the rug might be in a soft sea green, a light yellow, grey or blue, with the flowers in pale yellow, white, or pink with the leaves in various shades of green, the cat-tails adding a brown accent. The lines and masses are all simple to follow, and through their very simplicity make the rug striking. The rug can be made any desired size.

Pattern 773 comes to you with a transfer pattern of the design 15¼ x 19¾ inches; directions for making a hooked rug with illustrations; material requirements; and color suggestions (the colors are indicated by number on the pattern.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Gift for the Boy Friend

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Would it be proper for me to buy my boy friend a birthday gift? I have been going with him for a year and a half. He has been very thoughtful toward me, sending me flowers for my birthday and every holiday.

If it would be permissible, what would you suggest? I'd appreciate any suggestions you may offer as to the right present . . . as I don't want to appear "forward." READER.

Since this boy has shown such perfect taste in the choice of gift that he has sent you, it is indeed well for you to be thoughtful about the choice of gift that you plan to send him. Such a manneri, young man would resent your over-stepping good taste . . . all well-bred men do resent this in girls, even if often girls and women let their generosity run away with their good manners.

Flowers or a book or a box of candy are the perfect gift for him to give you. A well-chosen book is a perfect present for you to give him; and to take the place of the flowers or candy that he may send you, you may send him a cartoon of his favorite cigarets. Or, if you wish, a box of letter-paper, white or Scotch granite, of excellent quality and of the generous size appropriate to men.

Shower Talk

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What is the proper talk for a girl to give after the gifts have been opened at her bridal shower? E.

The betrothed girl doesn't wait until after all of the gifts have been opened to give a "talk" about the gifts in general. Instead as she opened each gift, she thanks the giver of the gift, first for her thoughtfulness, and then for the gift itself, commenting on its beauty or the use for which it is obviously destined. Somewhat like this, perhaps, "Julia, what a kind friend you are, to think of giving me such a beautiful gift! This set of bathroom bottles is lovely, and will exactly harmonize with my color scheme for my bathroom. Thank you, so much."

Then, remember, that the next day or at the first opportunity you have, you should write a note of thanks to every friend who has been so kind and generous about giving a gift for the shower.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Whip the plump figure into shape by doing this exercise for five minutes twice a day: Sit on the floor with the legs stretched out, heels pressing the floor. Extend the arms until the fingers touch the toes, bending from the hips, not from the waistline. Sort of rowing movement, guaranteed to reduce heavy thighs, rotund waistlines, ploppy tummies.

Moth patches often are produced by exposure to strong sunlight; they are relatives of freckles and liver patches, but dig deeper into the skin. They can be removed by the application of strong bleaches. Sorry; we cannot give formulas; such preparations are not to be compounded by the amateur cosmetic mixer.

What has become of the baby faced girl? She has passed out of the picture. Types change, same as fashions in clothes and in coiffures.

The insipid woman does not belong to this period when the sex is taking an active part in the world's affairs. Intelligent beauty is in favor. Time was when men asked "Is she pretty?" Now it is "Is she interesting?" The standard is good looks plus brains. Also plus good nature and delightful manners.

TWO-HOUR CONCERT -:- Philadelphia Orchestra, Paul Pendarvis -:- ON AIR TONIGHT

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

By J. JAMES MOORE
Pittsburgh Wing Commander.

Hello, everybody!

I'm going to devote today's column to asking you questions instead of answering the scores of questions that you have sent me. Also I have for you Air Dictionary No. 29, and an interesting letter from a girl member.

Here is my first question. What do you think we should do in order to get more members so that our Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph wing will be as large as the one in New York and San Francisco? What suggestions do you have?

What would you think of a membership contest with airplane trips as prizes? How would you like a ride over the city or an airplane trip to Washington or Detroit as your prize for bringing in new members? Would you consider that a worthwhile prize? Or what prizes would you suggest?

Here are a few questions in regard to model plane construction. Would you like us to print full size drawings of a championship Balsa glider—one of those tiny planes that are easy to make and stay up for a minute or more. How would you junior members like that?

Girl Members Praise Writers' Club Unit

Here is a dandy letter from Patricia Weiss, of Brookside Farms and member No. 895. It is about our new feature, the Writers' Club, which was announced just a few days ago. It reads:

"Of all the grand things the Junior Birdmen have done so far, I think the idea of the Writers' Unit is the best.

"I have always wanted to know girls of my own age in different cities, and now, at last, I have my chance. Please enroll me as a member of the new organization at once.

"I wonder if you could inform me by means of the Junior Birdmen column whether or not we will be allowed to take nonmembers to our outdoor meet. I really hope so because several of my friends are interested in the club, and if they are permitted to attend the meet I think they will join."

Thanks for the interesting letter, Patricia. In answer to your question, I think that your girl friends should join our club as soon as possible. Later there will be many indoor meetings that only members can attend. Gold or silver membership cards will have to be shown at the door before a person can enter.

Why not get seven other girls and form a Flight Squadron? Why not have the first such girls' group in Pittsburgh?

BOYS AND GIRLS SCAN FRECKLES

Counting freckles is a new and popular pastime in Pittsburgh and vicinity. Hundreds and hundreds of kiddies are trying to estimate how many of these brown spots show on their faces and scores of them have already entered the Sun-Telegraph contest for the freckled face championship—both boys and girls. The champions, by the way, are going to get wonderful prizes.

The contest will be staged at West View Park, Tuesday, July 31, as the feature event of the National Kiddies Day-Junior Patrol-Junior Birdmen of America outing to be sponsored by the Sun-Telegraph.

Hundreds of free strips of tickets are to be given to the kiddies of Pittsburgh and surrounding suburbs and towns for the rides and shows and the Pittsburgh Railways Company is going to furnish a 15-cent street car pass, good for the round trip to West View from any part of Pittsburgh.

Freckled face kiddies up to 16 years of age are requested to fill in the entry blank on this page and mail it at once. They must have 25 or more freckles to be eligible for the contest.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

What's your favorite hiccough remedy? Everybody I see on the street has a new cure to offer.

Even in the staid and dignified Common Pleas Court the subject of hiccough remedies, introduced here, is discussed.

Earl Jacobs, who sits behind the big desk in the Common Pleas assignment room, says that if the gentleman is suffering from hiccoughs places his finger tips behind his ears and firmly presses against the hollow spot, relief will follow.

A practical nurse writes that a mixture of 3 drops of spirits of champhor and 3 drops aromatic spirits of amonia in a wineglass of water taken every hour for 24 hours then at two hour intervals when the hiccoughs become less frequent cured a stubborn four-day case on which she was working.

She says the patient must be kept in quiet surroundings, given light food, and told to rest.

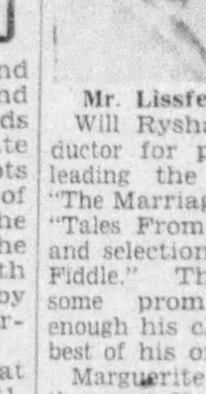
I hope all the remedies have helped our friend, Mr. Diouise, in Ambridge, who has been suffering for four years. If it has I know the Globe Trotters who have submitted remedies would be glad to hear about it.

Henry Eby next Friday at noon is going to tell us something about getting rid of hornets.

MUSIC LAWN CONCERT

Hotel Schenley

The "Pop" concert at Hotel Schenley lawn was more than welcome last night in the intense heat. Victor Saudek again planned light music for the occasion and the soloists were most agreeable.



Mr. Lissfelt

There was an unfamiliar march of Zitterbart, the popular melodies from "I Pagliacci," Rimsky - Korsakoff's "Caprice Espagnole" and the Liszt Second Rhapsodie.

Will Ryshanek was guest conductor for part of the program, leading the Mozart overture to "The Marriage of Figaro," Strauss' "Tales From the Vienna Woods" and selections from "Cat and the Fiddle." This young man shows some promise, and strangely enough his classic Mozart was the best of his offerings.

Marguerite Lang, soprano, sang the great Verdi air, "Pace, Pace," from "Forza del Destino." Both vocally and musically she was in excellent form and had such response that she had to repeat her encore, the popular "I Love You Truly," from "Chocolate Soldier."

KDKA Will Move Into New Home

By AIRCASTER

The last obstacle standing in the way of KDKA's new studio plans has been removed, the lease on a half-floor in the Grant building has been signed, and the pioneer station expects to be able to move into the new quarters the first of the year.

A considerable amount of construction work will be required to attain a two-story height for the main studios.

The management is determined that the station's new home shall be perfect in every detail.

* * *

WCAE is the only station in Pittsburgh that has an air-cooling system in its studios.

* * *

CRACK DOWN

The Federal Trade Commission is engaged in a cleanup of radio advertising.

Hearings are being held behind closed doors in Washington, questioning the honesty of many a commercial announcement.

E. J. Adams, chairman of the commission, opines:

"It appears that many advertizers who have been barred from newspapers have resorted to radio, which has not until now been subjected to supervision."

The commission intends to crack down on false and extravagant advertising claims.

* * *

AUDITION

A Chicago advertising agency brought a radio crew to town on Thursday, to put on an audition for a big local sponsor. Result unknown.

* * *

The Sunday Night program imported from Berlin and starring the best German musical talent, avoids any possibility of propaganda in a specification that there be no talk on the broadcast.

The local gasoline concern sponsoring the European series aims only to give American listeners a sample of radio entertainment from each Continental capital.

WCAE puts on a real seagoing thriller tomorrow night at 9, dramatizing the story of a young couple who, bored to distraction with their companions on a yachting trip, run away in a small lifeboat and get into various jams.

Local Highlights on WJAS Tonight

Other early features—Baron Elliott's band at 6:15 for a half-hour and Gregorio Scalzo's Ensemble at 6:45.

'Our Family' Drama On Air Tonight

At 7:45, the thrilling "Front Page Drama" is on the air.

Hello Darling,
Meet me at 2:30 tomorrow at Spear's. We'll look at their Bridal Home Outfit I've heard so much about.
3 Rooms Complete including even the Rugs, for only $249

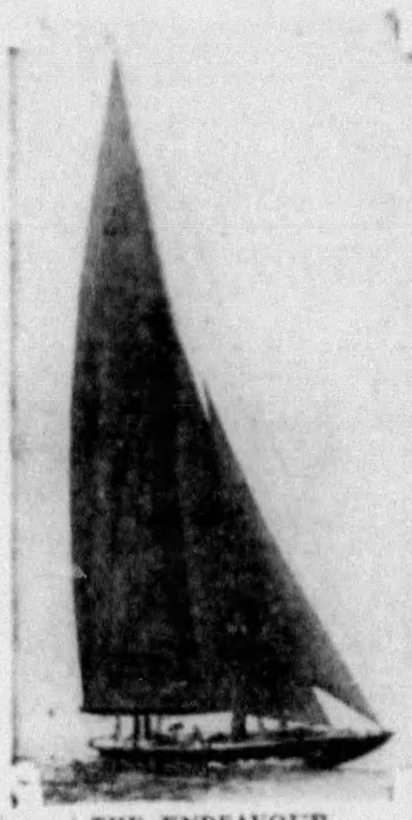
SPORTS COMMENT BY HARRY KECK

Bad Year for Pitchers. Joe Cronin Knows. What's an Amateur? Sopwith's History. Eddie Zivic Clicks. Packs Hard Punch.

This, take it from Joe Cronin, manager of the Washington Senators, is a bad year for pitchers. Especially curve ball pitchers, who are getting their ears pinned back by the sluggers.

Cronin, as he sees the American League championship gradually slipping from his grasp, says he believes one of the big reasons the Detroit Tigers are moving pennantward is that they are well equipped with strong-arm hurlers in Marberry, Bridges and Rowe, who fire the ball past the batters and have the smartest catcher in the majors to receive their deliveries, Mickey Cochrane, their manager.



THE ENDEAVOUR
(Read about its owner below)

Cronin well may bemoan the havoc that is being wrought against the pitchers. At the time he declared himself, a few days ago, his club had just made 26 runs in three successive games and won only one of them, all of the scores being 10-8.

WHEN IS AN AMATEUR?

Do you know the difference between an amateur and a professional in sports? The A. A. U. has just issued a bulletin to athletes and officials in which it states that an athlete ceases to be an amateur by:

Allowing his name to be used in connection with an advertisement, whether compensated for it or not.

Accepting compensation directly or indirectly for using the goods or apparatus of any person, firm, manufacturer, or agent.

By engaging for pay or financial benefit in any occupation or business transaction wherein his usefulness or value arises chiefly from the publicity given or to be given to the reputation or fame which he has secured from his performances in any sport rather than from his ability to perform the usual or natural acts and duties incident to such occupation or transaction.

By accepting compensation for coaching, instructing or preparing any person in or for any competition, exhibition or exercise.

By directly or indirectly receiving pay or financial benefits for participating in any sport or exhibition.

By disposing of prizes for personal gain.

By accepting, directly or indirectly, any payment for loss of time or wages in attending or training for any athletic competition.

By competing under an assumed name.

By being guilty of fraud or other grossly unsportsmanlike conduct in connection therewith.

This man T. O. M. Sopwith, of England, who has taken up the quest for the America's yachting cup where the late Sir Thomas Lipton left off, is quite a glamorous figure. His full name is Thomas Octave Murdoch Sopwith and he is about 45 years old. He has been yachting for pleasure approximately seven years and has won many prizes. The sport is all for sport's sake with him, for he is very wealthy and can afford the luxury. He will pilot his Endeavour in the United States waters this summer in an attempt to bring back the famous trophy to his country after a lapse of 83 years during which all other tries have failed.

Sopwith became a licensed aviator at 22, when flying was in its infancy, and before the World War he came to the United States as an exhibition flier. During the war he was a leading builder of airplanes and one of his own chief designers. Back in 1910, he won a prize of $20,000 by setting a record for a nonstop flight from England to Belgium.

Sopwith has embodied many of his own ideas in the construction of the Endeavour and believes he has a good chance of carrying back the old Victorian design trophy with him. His wife is a member of the crew of the Endeavour and an able assistant.

EDDIE ZIVIC SHOWS IMPROVED FORM

Eddie Zivic did a good job of restoring confidence in the improved ability of himself and his brother, Fritzie, by the manner in which he repeated his knockout victory over Joey Costa, of New York, at Greenlee Field. He showed better all-round form than in his first start after his return from California, and by the same token it is reasonable to assume that Fritzie also will look better when he steps out again, now that he is acclimated to the East once more.

Although Costa seems to be handicapped by a glass jaw, judging from the manner in which he buckled under all of Zivic's right hand shots to that point in both of their fights, the fact remains that no one else is knocking him out and he has met many of the good boxers in the East.

If there is any criticism at all of Eddie's work, it is that he gets hit too often himself. He started out a fine blocking and countering boxer and now he doesn't bother to block. It is amazing that he takes punches as well as he does in the light of his rather frail build, and his punching power is another revelation. If he can couple up some of his former defensive ability with his improved offensive power he figures to go a long way.

VIGNETTES OF SPORT

The local boxing commission offices will be moved the first of the month from the Koppers Building to the Law and Finance Building, where there will be room to weigh and examine all boxers instead of having this work done at the various arenas . . . Good idea . . . Jimmy Bronson is bringing over Gustav Elder, welterweight, middleweight and light-heavyweight champion of Germany, who has scored 24 knockouts in his last 30 fights, and will campaign him as a 147-pounder, seeking a title match for him with Barney Ross.

Harry Seymour, dean of local tennis men, still follows the sport closely, although he has been hiding in the background for some years now, and he disagrees with the views of the experts that the United States' chances against England in the Davis Cup challenge round, if we get past Australia in the finals, depend upon how Fred Perry goes for the Britons . . . He says they depend upon how Bunny Austin stands up for England . . . Perry figures to beat our best, and if he can get the proper support from Austin there won't be anything to it.

John Miljus, former local pitcher, who made the grade in the big leagues with the Pirates and other clubs, now is with Chattanooga in the Southern Association . . . There are few star bespectacled baseball players, but the other day Danny MacFayden, one of them, succeeded Hal Broaca, another, on the mound for the Yankees.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The throwing in of the towel by their Pittsburgh supporters proved a disappointing piece of news for Pie Traynor's Pirate battalion, but as they made ready to resume hostilities with the Dodgers today, the rank and file of the Pittsburgh players were miles away from any quitting mood.

In other words, the Buccos have decided to stay and stick with the time-honored Pirate brig which has weathered many worse storms than that which is tossing it about in Eastern seas at present.

Anyhow, the Pirates will show up this afternoon at Ebbets Field, where they will take on the Dodgers in a single contest. Ralph Birkofer is groomed to face the Stengels and the Buccos expect to look at the slants of Van Mungo or Ray Benge. The series will come to a close with a bargain bill tomorrow.

The Pirate log for the present journey is nothing to write home about. The Buccos have taken part in 10 engagements on the tour and they have been victorious only three times. When they finish in the Flatbush they will weigh anchor and steam away to Philadelphia, where they will end their seaboard cruise in a four-game series beginning Monday.

The Buccos are slated to take on the Cardinals at Forbes Field in three games beginning Friday of next week.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: YOUNGEST RADIO OPERATOR—Little Jean Hudson, of Laurel, Del., was only eight years old when she journeyed to Fort McHenry, Baltimore, with her father and succeeded in passing the examination to become a licensed radio operator. Only a few months afterward she won a world championship cup in Class E at the Century of Progress Receiving Contest when she took down messages at the rate of more than 20 words per minute. Jean sends and receives regularly on their station, W3BAK. LIGHT BULB WIRE IS NOT WIRE—The metal used in an electric light bulb is tungsten, which is a powder, and therefore it is impossible to draw it into wire. VINCE TO GET PURSE OF $25,000

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Vince Dundee has been signed to defend his world middleweight championship against Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, at Forbes Field, August 30 or September 6.

Bus Vogel, young promoter of Hickey Park, arrived back in Pittsburgh last night with the signed contract of Dundee and the latter's manager, Max Waxman.

Vogel was forced to boost the $15,000 guarantee offer made by Lew Raymond, rival promoter, to $25,000, with a privilege of 37½ per cent of the receipts to get Dundee into line for a 15-round bout. He ha sthe backing of two local men, who told him to get the match at any reasonable cost.

Yarosz is not yet signed, but it is believed his manager, Ray Foutts, will jump at the opportunity to land the fight for the title against a man whom Teddy defeated twice before the latter came into the championship.

The match will have to set an all-time local record for gate receipts to enable the promoters to break even or make money. Yarosz will get not less than 12½ per cent of the receipts and the rental of Forbes Field is another big item. The largest gate so far for a boxing show here was slightly in excess of $30,000 for a Cuddy DeMarco-Jack Zivic Milk Fund show at Forbes Field, 11 years ago. Yarosz and Dundee drew around $21,000 for a non-title match there last fall.

Local Pro Eleven Signs Bob Timmons

The signing of Bobby Timmons to a Pittsburgh Pirate, National Professional Football League, contract, gives the local club two of Pitt's splendid terminal men of the past three years, Joe Skladany, all-America star of last year, having signed some time ago.

Timmons, who weighs 195 pounds and stands 6 feet 1 inch, is a powerful player. Skladany has expressed satisfaction at having his college mate perform with him in the pro ranks.

Timmons said yesterday he did not need any preliminary work to get in shape for the training grind which will start at Mt. Pleasant, August 26.

FIGHT RESULTS

READING WINS

U. S. NETTERS BATTLE AUSTRALIA IN DAVIS CUP PLAY

YANKS CHOICES TO SCORE WIN OVER ANZACS

BULLETIN.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 21.—(AP.)—Jack Crawford, of Australia, defeated Frank X. Shields, of the United States, in the first singles match of their Davis Cup interzone finals here today, 6-1, 6-2 and 12-10.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 21.—(AP.)—After Uncle Sam's four Davis Cup players held a final rehearsal on Wimbledon's historic center court, where they open up today against Australia for the right to challenge the cup-holding English team, Capt. R. Norris (Dick) Williams, the American squad leader, spoke confidently and enthusiastically of their prospects.

It was Williams' opinion that Frank X. Shields and Sidney B. Wood, Jr., the singles players, and George M. Lott, Jr., and Lester R. Stoefen, the doubles team, would squeeze through three matches to two.

Williams anticipates an easy victory for Lott and Stoefen over the Australian combination of Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist, and looks for singles victories over Vivian McGrath by Wood and Shields.

The inter-zone series opens with Shields pitted against Crawford, in a match between the top-ranking players of their respective countries, and Wood against the youthful McGrath, who employs a two-handed grip for backhand shots.

The consensus here runs along the same line as Williams' opinion, making the Americans a well-defined favorite to eliminate Australia. The Aussies advanced to the penultimate round after a none-too-impressive conquest of the Czecho-Slovakian team.

M'FARLANE SETS GOLF RECORD

By TOM BIRKS

The close of one of the bitterest struggles ever waged on a local links found Willie MacFarlane, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., former United States open king, crowned Pennsylvania state open champion yesterday at the Oakmont Country Club links, when the veteran staving off a determind bid for victory by Sam Parks, Jr., of the South Hills, finished with a record-breaking 294 for the 72 holes of medal play.

MacFarlane's brilliant score set an all-time record for four rounds of competitive play at Oakmont. In addition to winning the $600 that goes with the title, he picked up another $100 with his low 18-hole total of 69. Parks and Delvecchio each won $235.

Parks matched MacFarlane, stroke for stroke, and was not found wanting until the seventeenth green, when the learned shot-maker garnered a stroke, picked up another on the seventy-first and two more on the seventy-second to give him a four-stroke lead over his youthful rival.

DEL VECCHIO CLOSE

Earlier in the day, Perry Del Vecchio, of Greensburg, had started out two strokes behind Parks and MacFarlane, and finished with a 74 to give him a total of 298. When Parks finished, he was tied with Perry for second money. Wild Bill Melhorn was fourth with 299, Al Espinosa, of the Portage Club, was fifth with an even 300; Denny Shute, former British open champion, was sixth with 302; Vincent Eldred, of Highland, 1932 winner, was seventh with 303, and Ted Luther, of Valley Heights, took home eighth and last money with a total of 304.

Billy Marks, of Oakmont, won the low amateur prize with a score of 309, while George H. Flinn, also of Oakmont, was second with 315.

Some brilliant golf was exhibited by practically all of the leaders. It was the drama of MacFarlane and Parks playing together, matching shots, knowing they had to shoot a 75 on the last round to win, that stole the show.

PARKS SHOWS CLASS

MacFarlane and Parks put on an act for the gallery, and it was the greatest exhibition of golf ever staged over the famous Hulton layout. Parks would have beaten anyone but Willie yesterday.

At the completion of the first nine holes in the afternoon round, the pair were out in 39, two strokes over par and the gallery had visions of Del Vecchio winning first place. Then the New York wizard flashed some of the form that has named him the greatest iron player in America. He covered the back nine in 33, two under par, despite the fact that he took a six on the fifteenth hole. He never lost his poise, and looked every inch a champion as he stroked with deadly precision.

Parks lost, but he gained much prestige in his defeat. No player in the country could have beaten MacFarlane yesterday. The scores:

Andy Mohouski's triple with two mates on bases in the tenth inning gave the Snubs A. C. a surprising 8-6 victory over the undefeated Commercial Garage team in bracket V of the senior division of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament at Washington Park before a large crowd.

It was Steve Grapp's homer with one on that tied the score for the Snubs in the sixth canto. Johnny Boarder also hit a home run. The Commercials led up until the sixth inning.

D. Bartirome, Louis (Lemons) Pugliano and Joe De Battista starred for the losers. The entire Snubs team played a great game as it outhit the Commercials.

Mickey Blank pitched the E. J. McAvoys to a 2-1 win over the Overbrook Independents in another bracket V contest. First Baseman Wayman and Shortstop Smith played a bang up game for the McAvoys.

SOFTBALL SLANTS

The F. J. Broads scored an impressive 10-0 victory over the Tarentum Firemen to tighten their grip on first place in Bracket VI of the senior division. This marked the Broads' fourth straight. Tom Nee, who blanked the Firemen, fanned 10 batsmen. He collected four hits. Catcher Dunn and I. Crummie hit home runs. Center Fielder Young played well for the losers.

Manager Clyde White's Glenfield A. A. team clinched the championship of Bracket II of the senior division by trouncing the Hugh A. McMasters, 16 to 2. The winners finished their bracket with seven victories. Red Merriman pitched for the winners. C. Martin carried off the hitting honors for the Glenfields with 5 hits in as many trips to the plate.

The Hungry 9 Club, which is making a strong bid for a play off berth, defeated the Weissbergs, 17 to 7, in a Bracket VII game of the senior division. A large crowd saw the game.

Manager Louis F. Youngk's Newsies walloped the Acme Club, 13 to 1, in an intermediate division contest. The entire Newsies' team played a bang up game.

85 Stars Entered In Hearst Swim

CHICAGO, July 21.—(Universal.)—The box-car figure event of the summer sports world will see 85 men and women swimmers striving tomorrow for $10,000 prize money in the second annual William Randolph Hearst-Herald and Examiner marathon swim carnival.

The prize money will go to the first man out of a field of 65 to plow through 15 miles of water in the lake and lagoon at a Century of Progress, to the first five who trail him and to the woman victor and first four-place swimmers in the women's five-mile event in the lagoon, in which 20 are competing.

Those who collect will be the greatest in the world at their specialty.

Hines Scores Upset Victory Over Parker

HUNTINGTON, N. Y., July 21.—(AP.) — A year's residence abroad and constant play against Europe's leading stars apparently has done wonders for Wilmer Hines' tennis.

The Columbia, S. C., youngster, one-time ace of the University of North Carolina team, created a furore in the Crescent-Hamilton Club's invitation tornament yesterday when he ousted Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, ranked No. 8 nationally, 7-5, 6-1.

SUN-TELEGRAPH PARKS NETTERS NEAR FINALS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Semi-final and final jousts in both men's and women's play head this afternoon's bill of competition as the annual Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Pittsburgh parks tennis championships enter the fifth day of hostilities on the rectangles of Frick, South, Highland, Olympia, West, Schenley and North parks. Action will terminate today at West and probably at Olympia with windups on the other lots scheduled for tomorrow and Monday, the exact bill of latter-round play depending on such factors as weather, progress of today's card and the freedom of the contenders to cavort over the week-end.

The terrific showers of the night before last caused surprisingly little delay in the rush of the municipal event toward conclusion. In Schenley and Highland parks alone were the courts put completely out of commission by the downpour. The other layouts were in at least partial trim in time to keep things moving pretty much according to the original intention of the committee.

Three seeded luminaries went by the board in the course of yesterday's session, though two of these, Ralph Beilstein and Bill Blum, of West, were eliminated in semi-final jousts by rivals listed above them on the roster, so that their defeats can scarcely be classified in the upset category. The only real wallop taken by the dope yesterday was absorbed at Frick, where Jim Slocum, hard-driving Pitt varsity star, traveled the limit in the killing heat to down Ted Rosenthal, second of the select group, 7-5, 1-6, 6-1.

A protest over Slocum's eligibility to compete in the parks tournament was lodged. It was stated that the family of the Panther youth owns a court in Regent Square and that therefore he should be barred as a player having access to private tennis facilities. In denying this allegation, Slocum stated that not only was the court in question not the property of his family, but that it was laid out on ground possessed by the city and that it has not been in commission this season anyway.

In view of the foregoing, Slocum will be permitted to meet Don Krey, 1934 Carnegie Tech captain, in the Forbes-Braddock semi-finals this afternoon. In the opposite half, Harry Wald will take on George Sobel, while in the feminine finale, Mary McManus will encounter Betty Bethune. The summary:

CHILLYSAUCE

Jewel Ens is headed for a Pirate coaching job in 1935, according to well-defined advices. Some of our village correspondents who pick up interesting gossip here and there are quite sure they saw Mrs. Ens looking for a home. The wife of the popular Jewel is a Pittsburgh girl who has been living with her three children in St. Louis, but she makes no secret of the fact that she prefers Pittsburgh as a permanent abode.

Ens has been working under the McKechnie banner at Boston, but Pie Traynor long has regarded Jewel as one of the smartest of the baseball men. Skipper Bill has the same opinion of Ens, but inasmuch as he has two other assistants in Hank Gowdy and Duffy Lewis, Bill, perhaps, would do a favor for the boy whom he developed into a great third-sacker.

There is no better coach in the league than Ens, who rarely makes a mistake in judgment and is a good feeler who keeps up the morale of any club with which he is associated; indeed, the men of the diamond say he would be an ideal manager were he to get sufficient opportunity to put over his stuff in some big league setup. Ens, if he comes, undoubtedly would work with Honus Wagner, which would allow Crandall time he needed to work with the Pirate pitchers. And perhaps Otis might do some scouting.

The fans in Cleveland are up in arms against Walter Johnson who is not meeting with much success as he tries to keep the Indians in the pennant fight. Johnson is on a spot similar to that occupied by George Gibson, the difference being noted in the attitude of his employers. The Indian directors, defying the fans' and the writers' opinions, have given Johnson a contract for 1935.

Few pitchers are equipped to become outstanding managers. Personally, I feel that Burleigh Grimes would come close to being a topnotch pilot. Burleigh knows baseball from the angle of the other players and he has courage and vision. Grimes is truly remarkable when he is in a reminiscent mood. He gives you the exact details of plays that won games more than 10 years back and he associates the details with other interesting facts.

The best story of the day comes from Brooklyn via Journalist Tommy Holmes and appropriately it bears a Casey Stengel tagline. Dodgers on the bench were discussing President Heydler's decision reversing a Bill Klem ruling on an infield fly. Somebody wondered if Klem ever had been reversed before in his long and honorable career. None on the bench knew.

A young baseball writer listening in on the chatter wished to settle the issue. Klem at the time was dressing for the game of the day when the boy scribe volunteered to find out in a first-hand manner. The young fellow asked about the location of the umpires' dressing room and Manager Stengel gave the instructions:

"Right up this runway near the concession room, young man, and I'll stand here and catch you coming out."

Casey's added observation on the infield fly controversy was quite pithy. Said Casey:

"If it was a base hit instead of a putout with Klem in there, some of these other umpires probably would have found some way of ruling it a home run."

To the Sports Editor:

Lots of people have said that all of our cities are getting to look alike. I don't agree with them. There is lots of difference that you can notice. And that goes for different parts of the country. Why, there is a spot down in North Carolina where sometimes you can see eight different rainstorms going on at the same time. It is from a high mountain. I think the depression had a lot to do with changing the looks of our cities. I have traveled a lot, but I still get a good kick out of it.

LOVELOCK WINS MILE RACE

WHITE CITY STADIUM, Eng., July 21.—(AP.)—Jack Lovelock, great New Zealand mile runner, today defeated Bill Bonthron, of Princeton, in the mile run climax of the annual international track meet between the combined forces of Oxford-Cambridge and Princeton-Cornell.

The Oxonian won by a yard in a thrilling race with Bonthron, who had chased him to the then record mile of 4:07.6 in the Princeton Stadium last summer, a mark since erased by Glenn Cunningham's great 4:06.7 mile on the same track last month.

It was a stunning upset for the Americans who had been led to believe a knee operation last winter had robbed the New Zealand star of much of his speed. Bonthron only two weeks ago had established a new world mark of 3:48.8 for the 1,500 meters and was thought to be at the top of his form.

Lovelock won in the slow time of 4:15.4.

Paul Vipond, of Cornell, was a distant fourth as Reach, of Oxford, slipped in behind Lovelock and Bonthron.

The victory and that of Charles Stanwood, former Bowdoin star, now at Oxford and a three-time winner last year, in the 120-yard high hurdles sent the Oxford-Cambridge forces away to a flying start. Stanwood won in 15:3 seconds with his teammate Pilbrow second and George Willock, of Princeton, third. Only first places count.

SZWEDKA NEW CITY CHAMP

After years of trying, Andy Szwedka, of Lawrenceville, rules as the City golf champion. Andy scored a decisive 9-and-8 triumph over Dave Wilder, former Duquesne University basketball star, in the final round of the annual municipal tournament over the Schenley Park links yesterday to realize an ambition he has had for years.

The makeup of the private club team which is to meet a team of public links stars at South Park tomorrow in a benefit match, the proceeds of which will be turned over to the fund being raised to help defray the expenses of the national public links tournament, has been set. The team follows:

Bill Nicklin, Stanton Heights, captain; Carl Haller, Jr., Stanton Heights; Xavier Totten, Wildwood; Jimmy Kraft, Field Club; Bill Thorton, Field Club; Paden Gamble, Youghiogheny; Fred Stout, Shannopin; Dick Boucek, Highland; Charles Jamison, Greensburg; Wilson Marks, Oakmont; Jim Marks, Oakmont; Claude McKee, South Hills; Jack Benson, South Hills; R. B. Parker, Highland; Phil Gundelfinger, Jr., Montour; Bob Barclay, Stanton Heights; Tom Jamison, Jr., Oakmont; Billy Mercer, Shannopin; Foster Meyer, Highland; Sid Carson, Greensburg; Joe Totten, Wildwood, and Charles Mck. Lynch, Jr., Greensburg.

Mrs. R. F. Phillips, of South Hills, turned in a score of 87-16-71 to lead the field in the invitation tournament at the Pittsburgh Country Club yesterday. Mrs. W. C. Manville led in the second division with 98-23-75.

Kensington Legion Nine Easy Victor

FORD CITY, Pa., July 21.—The New Kensington American Legion junior baseball team defeated the Ford City Legion tossers, 10 to 4, here yesterday in the first game of the series for the Western Pennsylvania championship.

TRIBE, BROWNS ADVANCE IN FLAG RACE

Associated Press.

Two significant changes were recorded in the American League standings today. While the pace-setting Tigers and second-place Yankees were taking a pair of trimmings from tail-end clubs yesterday, the Cleveland Indians moved into third place ahead of Boston and the St. Louis Browns slipped past the Senators into fifth.

Due to Monte Pearson's wildness, Cleveland had a difficult time winning its fourth in a row and its second from the Red Hose, 5 to 3.

Rogers Hornsby's Browns took a more decisive method of shoving the 1933 league champions down to sixth place. They won, 7 to 4, for their sixth straight triumph.

Jimmy Foxx was the cause of Detroit's downfall. He clouted his twenty-ninth home run of the season in the eighth inning to provide the winning tally in the A's 5-4 victory. The White Sox had to go 13 innings to beat the Yankees, 7 to 6.

The proverbial "luck" of the Giants held good to give the National League leaders an extra half game margin over the Cubs. Four runs down to the Reds in the fourth inning, they were halted for an hour by a rainstorm. When play was resumed St Johnson had cooled off and couldn't halt the New York batters, who slammed out seven runs in the fourth and won, 11 to 5.

The Cubs and Phillies were rained out and the third-place Cardinals kept pace with the Giants by smacking down the Braves, 5 to 1. Pittsburgh and Brooklyn had an open date.

SOCCER BODY IN CONFAB

With delegates from as far East as Boston, and as far West as Milwaukee on hand, the United States Soccer Referees' Association went into its annual convention at the Fort Pitt Hotel this morning.

Headed by President Jim McFarland, of Cleveland, all of the national officers are on hand. The gathering swings into executive action this morning for the first business session, and will carry on until tomorrow night, when the annual banquet will be held.

Among the arrivals last evening were First Vice President Arthur Watson, of Philadelphia; Second Vice President Al Gordon, of Baltimore; Treasurer Jimmy Caton, of London, N. J., and Secretary Jim Welsh, of Boston.

Among the honored guests are Tom Cahill, of New York, called the father of American soccer and the pioneer of the game in this country, and John J. McEwan, executive officer of the United States Football Association.

Babe Ruth Ready To Rejoin Yanks

CLEVELAND, July 21.—(AP.)—Babe Ruth, home-run idol of the New York Yankees, prepared to leave here and rejoin his team at Chicago.

He spent yesterday in his hotel suite, hobbling around a bit to test the leg injured Wednesday, when a hard-hit ball from Lou Gehrig's bat inflicted a painful shin-bone injury.

NEW YORK CLOSE WITH NET CHANGES

STOCK PRICES CONTINUE DECLINE

NEW YORK, July 21.—An accumulation of overnight selling orders depressed the stock market further in the early part of today's trading. Metals, however, were rather steady.

Case, Bethlehem and American Commercial Alcohol lost around a point each. United States Steel, Santa Fe, du Pont, American Telephone and Chrysler receded fractionally. United States Smelting gained a shade.

While strike news was still disturbing, financial market commentators continued to place most emphasis upon business and financial trends having a bearing upon the autumn trade outlook.

MARGINS NARROW

Sustained automobile output at a relatively high level was a source of satisfaction. Cram estimated production the past week totaled 65,829 units, a decline of 803 from last week. The gain over the corresponding period last year narrowed to 2,697 units. A slight recession in retail demand for cars was reported.

A profusion of second quarter earnings statements afforded statisticians opportunity for study of profit trends. While generally earnings showed a good recovery compared with the second quarter last year, a narrowing of profit-margins was seen in a number of instances.

COTTON GAINS

The cotton textile institute estimated cotton cloth production for the week ended July 14, had increased to 75,000,000 yards compared with 56,829,000 the preceding week. Rising raw cotton prices lately stimulated buying of goods.

The monthly wholesale price index compiled by the bureau of labor statistics showed a further gain of 1.2 per cent last month. On June 30, it stood at 74.6, the highest since April, 1931.

The British pound opened at $5.04 7-16, off 3-16. French francs were 0.00¼ lower at 6.58¾ cents.

WHEAT TAKES FRESH SPURT

CHICAGO, July 21.—A new upward tendency showed itself in grain values early today. Record-breaking high temperatures for the season were reported over practically all of the corn belt, and the Liverpool wheat market displayed unexpected relative firmness.

Opening at -⅜ up, September new 99-99¼, Chicago wheat afterwards rose all around. Corn started unchanged to ½ higher, and continued to mount.

Higher Grain Prices, U. S. Refunding Operations Blur Hopes of Early Inflationary Action

Some Wall street prophets do not look for Washington to give much comfort to inflationists over the next few months. The Treasury, for one thing, is expected to carry out long refunding operations later in the year. Washington reports said September 15 refunding issues might exceed a billion dollars, provided the United States government bond market holds up. Moreover, short crops and the consequent rise in prices of grains and cotton and lesser farm products are counted upon to take some of the wind out of the sails of the inflationists.

In addition, there is renewed talk of stabilization of the British pound, which has been holding in comparatively a steady range against the dollar for months. If the pound is anchored to gold again, money experts point out, one of the chief reasons for maintaining flexibility in the fixing of the gold value of the dollar would be removed, providing the pound is not revalued at much lower levels than it now occupies against the dollar. All things considered, some prophets think the radical inflation bugaboo will sink into obscurity this fall, with chances of revival if business does not pick up and the federal debt continues to mount.

Among the straws that monetary observers believe may indicate the British are willing to stabilize the pound, at least against the dollar, was the acknowledgement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Neville Chamberlain, that the British government gradually was relaxing its embargo on foreign loans. A creditor country, it was pointed out, has need of a stable money unit as a medium for making loans and collecting them. Some economists attribute London's rise to world-wide supremacy as a money center to the operations of the old gold standard and the respect it earned for the pound. And London, it was said, probably would like to regain the international money-lending leadership that went to New York after the war.

Just as the steel industry has increased its capacity through the depression, although it has been called upon to use only part of it, so the stock exchange, with business at the lowest ebb in 10 years, has been perfecting its facilities to expedite the handling of quotations. The stock exchange has had only one million-share day since June 8. In the meanwhile, however, experiment has been pushed on a new express ticker system to eliminate the delays in the quoting of active stocks on days when the turnover runs beyond 5,000,000 shares, which is about the capacity of the present ticker.

Just how long it will be before the stock exchange will need the express ticker system, no one is rash enough to predict, under present conditions. The stock exchange authorities, pointing out that speculation always has run in cycles of great activity followed by periods of stagnation, assume the recent dearth of trading represents sub-normal dullness, even with due emphasis on the anticipated effects of federal rule of speculation. The great activity in stocks in 1929 and through the first half of 1930 speeded the installation of the present high-speed ticker. By the time it was installed in September, 1930, trading had fallen off considerably. But a year ago five and six million share days made even the high-speed instrument seem inadequate.

A statement by Packard Motor Car Company says that a great part of the second quarter's loss represents investment in the intensified development program which will broaden the company's markets through the introduction later of a new model car in a considerably lower-priced field, in addition to new models of the cars long established throughout the world in the higher-priced field. The new car will be in a price field non-competitive with current models, which will of course be continued.

New Rail and Utility Financing Looms

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor

RELAXATING OF the more stringent provisions of the Securities Act is resulting in the resumption of negotiations which may be followed by a revival of new offerings of bonds later in the year. Few of the proposed issues represent industrial financing. Discussion is confined almost entirely to railroad and utility issues.

A few financing operations in the industrial field are being considered but offerings of this type are not expected to reach any large volume. Industrial corporations are finding the commercial paper market offers an inexpensive field for temporary financing.

Evidence that credit actually is being extended in greater volume when the borrowers are satisfactory is to be seen in the steady increase in the volume of commercial paper outstanding. Recent figures reported by Federal Reserve member banks showed $151,000,000 of commercial paper outstanding as compared with $141,000,000 on May 31, $109,000,000 at the close of 1933 and $72,000,000 a year ago.

Cost Retards New Offerings

THE HIGH COST of preparing registration statements and issuing prospectuses under the new law has been a factor retarding much new financing where the need for additional capital is not imperative. This does not apply to railroads to the same extent since their financing is subject to Interstate Commerce Commission approval and does not have to meet the registration provisions of the new law. Circulars for new railroad issues, however, are more elaborate than in the past and this increases the cost.

Registration statements require such complete data that a large staff of accountants, experts and attorneys must devote great periods of time in order to meet every provision of the law. The fact that there is much doubt about many technicalities also adds to the difficulty of the task and incidently to its cost.

Most Operations For Refunding

A MAJOR SHARE of the demand for new financing is for refunding operations to meet coming maturities. In the cases of particularly strong corporations, efforts are being made to replace outstanding bond issues with new issues bearing lower coupon rates. Retirement of indebtedness to banks provides another reason for new financing. At the present time there is little demand for capital for new operating facilities.

It is generally believed that new issues will be placed on the market slowly at first and that the number of offerings will be increased later in the year if the bonds move satisfactorily.

Canadian Freight Movement Expands

OTTAWA, July 21.—Canadian freight loadings during the week ended July 14, involved 45,380 cars, which is an increase of 5,442 cars over the preceding week and a gain of 5,546 over the like week in the preceding year.

News and Views

PAINT DEMAND LIGHT

Demand for lead pigments, zinc oxides, lithopone and fillers has turned quiet in line with seasonal influences. Chemical color makers are expecting some increase in business in connection with the government home repair program.

DAIRY INDUSTRY OUTLOOK

The Standard Statistics Company, commenting on the position of the dairy products industry, says that the reduced supplies of milk as a result of the drought have done much to strengthen the profits outlook for the trade.

FUR SALES DECREASE

Domestic sales of furs by members of the American Fur Merchants' Association, Inc., during June are said to have declined more than 60 per cent below the total for the corresponding month of last year.

AUTOMOTIVE EXPORTS

A report from the Commerce Department today listed the value of 1933 automotive products by American producers to be $93,360,908, an increase of 17 per cent over 1932.

AIR EXPRESS GAINS

Air lines of the United States carried 970,844 pounds of express during the first five months of this year, an increase of 49 per cent over the same period last year, according to W. A. Hamilton, of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

LOCAL MARKET TURNOVER LIGHT

Stocks were nervous and hesitant on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange in the short week-end session today but volume continued light and there was no conspicuous selling on any particular issue or group. The tone of the market here reflected the situation on the "big board" where prices eased back slowly following yesterday's set-back which was the sharpest in several weeks.

Fluctuations on the market here were generally confined to fractions. The market lacked breadth and was similar in character to those of the two preceding sessions. Pittsburgh Screw & Bolt held steady around 5½ after having dropped 1½ points yesterday. Lone Star Gas convertible preferred fell back a fraction and the common was fairly steady. Heavy industrials were dull and quiet as were the brewings and miscellaneous specialties.

AUTO FINANCING ON UPTREND

WASHINGTON, July 21.—(AP.)—Figures compiled by the Commerce Department show that automobile financing—one of the indicators of business conditions—increased heavily during the first five months of this year as compared with the same period of 1933.

The total of new cars sold on the deferred payment plan, based on reports from 282 organizations, was $222,670,779 for the 1934 period against $120,334,727 for 1933.

During the same period, 480,498 used cars were financed for a total of $107,443,416—an average of $224—compared with 330,182 financed for $72,768,971—an average of $220—for the five months of 1933.

BOARD SEEKS PHONE DATA

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The telephone division of the Federal Communications Commission has ordered every telephone company subject to the new communications act to file schedules of rates and charges and duplicates of contracts and agreements with it on or before September 1, 1934.

DETROIT, July 21.—(INS.)—Complaining of sharply decreased revenues the Michigan Bell Telephone Company has served notice that it would seek modification of the recent order of the Public Utilities Commission cutting the phone company's rate.

The commission's action forced the Bell Company to offer its subscribers an unlimited number of calls per month at a price about one-third higher than the old system whereby phone users were charged 4 cents for each call over a certain monthly limit. The "metered service" and the "unlimited service" are now optional with the subscriber.

COTTON PRICES ADVANCE

NEW YORK, July 21.—Cotton futures opened very steady, 9 to 19 points advance on commission house buying owing to relatively higher Liverpool cables and absence of relief in drought areas. July, 12.83; October, 12.95; December, 13.10; January, 13.14; March, 13.27; May, 13.37.

October contracts sold up to 13.02 and March to 13.29 on the initial demand, but the advance met some further realizing and some scattered Southern selling.

After the opening demand had been supplied the volume of business tapered off with the market showing reactions of 3 or 4 points from the best at the end of the first half hour.

BANKERS SEE NO CREDIT EXPANSION

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

Mr. Rukeyser

NEW YORK, July 21.—Unless the unexpected occurs, there will be no sharp and significant expansion of commercial loans of member banks between now and the end of the year.

With the lessons of the depression behind them, commercial borrowers tend to think of a debt-free condition as ideal.

Before the bank holiday and insurance of deposits, the timidity came primarily from lenders. In certain centers, bankers, fearful of possible runs, were reluctant to tie up the normal proportion of their loanable funds in commercial paper. They aspired to put themselves in a super liquid position.

CONFIDENCE RETURNING

With the partial return of confidence, and with the vast improvement in the capital structure of banks, thanks to the pouring in of federal funds, and with the new reassurance given to depositors through insurance, bankers are gradually getting themselves into a mood where they would welcome a demand for good commercial loans.

But the demand is not forthcoming.

Bankers explain that the real purpose of bank credit is to help customers to get over seasonal and other peaks, but, with business still distinctly in the subnormal zone, many concerns are not hard put to operate on their own working capital. The strongest corporations before the depression freed themselves of dependence on the banks by selling stocks and other securities to investors, and thus piling up huge reserves of cash.

BANK DEPOSITS UP

In view of the prospective limited demand for commercial loans, the economists of one of the outstanding middle western banks predicted that interest rates on customers' loans would be no higher than now around the first of the year.

Those corporations with prime credit which are using bank credit and getting such funds at spectacularly low interest rates. The net effect of thus buying money cheap is to effect an important operating economy. The strong borrowers get the advantage of a competitive rate by asking various banks what they would charge to accommodate them. It is certainly a buyer's market for money, though you would have a hard time convincing the weak would-be borrower of the fact.

A real pickup in venturesomeness would quicken velocity, and then financiers would soon have to think of ways and means of applying the brakes at the psychological moment.

South Side Boy Injured By Auto

Harry Dailey, 11, of 2610 Larkins way, was in South Side Hospital today with injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile near his home yesterday.

The driver, James Rogan, 25, of 67 South Seventeenth street, took the boy to the hospital, police said. He said the boy ran into the path of his machine.

Watch, Car Check Stolen by Thugs

Anthony Walsh, 42 of 4023 Winterburn street, was robbed of his watch and a car check by two robbers who held him up on the Greenfield avenue steps. To prevent pursuit the robbers removed Walsh's shoes and tossed them down the hillside.

Heart Attack Kills Man In Parking Lot

William E. Dorsey, 65, of Blawnox, a retired printer, was fatally stricken while going to his automobile in a parking lot in North Highland avenue late yesterday, the Coroner's office reported. Death was attributed to a heart ailment.

Boy Hurt by Train On North Side Dies

Anthony Churilla, 10, died in St. John's Hospital today of injuries received when he was crushed beneath a Pennsylvania Railroad freight train on the North Side Wednesday, the Coroner's office reported.

STEEL OUTPUT UNCHANGED AT 28%

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel ingots this week may be estimated at 28 per cent of capacity, unchanged from last week, with no likelihood of any material increase in the next three weeks.

Current production comprises steel for identified construction jobs, rails, tin plate, steel for mill stocks, and current new business.

The first two items named constitute "backlog business," prominent now because other business is so reduced. Tin plate is not backlog because contracts are flexible and the real business is specifications. There is a considerable volume of stocking as mills are replenishing in semi-finished, in pipe and to a limited extent in a few other lines.

The volume of new business received in lines in which buyers stocked through June 30 is quite limited in tonnage. There are many orders but with a few exceptions they are small individually. Some are from small users who could not foresee their requirements and make contracts before the price advances of last April and some are from buyers who did stock but need some odds and ends to meet their current requirements.

The trade is unable to make any close estimates as to the amount of stocks in buyers' hands, because there has been no measure of consumption for about 90 days, first on account of buyers stocking and lately on account of their liquidating. Before stocking started ingot production was at about 52 per cent of capacity and that was held to represent consumption. In this report four weeks ago the results of certain conjectures were given, assuming first a slight increase in consumption for a short time, and then declining consumption.

CONSUMPTION ANALYSIS

Subtracting consumption from production, it appeared that stocks equaled the amount of steel that would be produced in one week at a 60 per cent operating rate. With consumption at its recent high point at about 54 per cent of steel capacity, consumption in the normally dullest month of the year might be set at about 40 per cent, and if liquidation of stocks were at a pace that would exhaust them in five weeks there would be 12 points this week, while the difference between this week's 28 per cent operating rate and the consuming rate would also be 12 points. While there is some forcing of a balance in this, the sketch can hardly be far out.

Liquidation of stocks will not continue at a uniform rate, as some consumers will exhaust their stocks sooner than others, while other consumers will run out of some sizes or descriptions of material, and thus new buying should increase week by week, though in no large volume.

It does not follow that production will increase week by week, because mills themselves have been stocking and they may now have done all they care to do.

AUGUST RISE SEEN

A prevalent but not universal view in the trade is that improvement will begin about the middle of August, partly from stocks having been liquidated and partly from buyers anticipating autumn requirements. There is doubt about the latter point, however, on account of the three series of price reductions suddenly made recently, the last being reductions of a dollar a ton on common black sheets, 24 guage, and "pickled in the breakdown" sheets. Buyers are likely to take hold only as they must. Some members of the trade expect nothing substantial until after the first week or two of September.

The automobile industry is doing better than was expected and is buying steel in a fair way. The intention seems to be to make, this month and next, all the cars that will be needed in the remainder of the year, to clear the way for preparations against the new models, there having been vexatious delays on the last occasion.

Now and then a dealer can sell a mill a small lot of scrap. No mill has been openly in the market since early April. Sales of heavy melting, No. 2 and hydraulic compressd in the last week are estimated to have totaled less than a thousand tons. Mills will buy only as they see definitely a substantial increase in their operations. Prices are not quotably changed, heavy melting having been at $11.50 to $12 since late in May.

Building and Loan Liquidation Ebbs

NEW YORK, July 21.—During the last half of 1933, investors in building and loan shares seeking associations to repurchase their old holdings, decreased 20 per cent from the figure recorded for the first half of the year, Philip Lieber, of Shreveport, La., president of the United States Building and Loan League, reports. In the first six months of this year he said another decrease of 24 per cent in their number was registered in comparison with the last six months of 1933.

Weekly Bank Clearings

NEW YORK, July 20.—(AP.)—For the third successive week bank clearings have exceeded the figures of the week preceding, while the aggregate of $1,729,637,- under last year's. The total this week for all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $5,163,287,000, which was 7.5 per cent below that of a year ago. This contrasts with a reduction of 11.7 per cent a week earlier. Clearings at New York City were $3,433,650,000, a loss of 13.9 per cent, while the aggregate of $1,729,637,000 for all outside centers represented an increase of 8.4 per cent.

The active speculative trading in July, 1933, resulted in swelling bank settlements at that time and accounts, in the main, for the reduced amount this year. Only two outside centers, however, reported smaller bank clearings this week, namely, Boston and Minneapolis. There was an increase in the total from the preceding week this year of $416,644,000, whereas a year ago the increase for the corresponding two weeks was only $2,957,000. At a number of important outside centers a substantial increase in the bank clearings occurred this week, chiefly at Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Cleveland, Kansas City, Omaha, Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas and Portland, Ore.

Figures for leading cities, showing increases and decreases as compared with those of last year are printed herewith; also, daily bank clearings for the year to date (000 omitted):

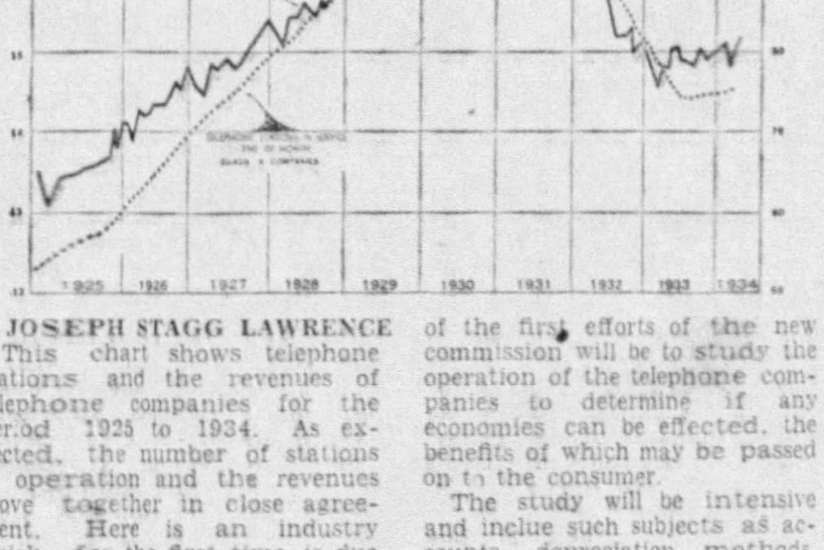
Commission to Study 'Phone Rate Problem



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

This chart shows telephone stations and the revenues of telephone companies for the period 1925 to 1934. As expected, the number of stations in operation and the revenues move together in close agreement. Here is an industry which, for the first time, is due to feel the reins of federal regulation. In fact, the control of the telephone companies seems to be the principal duty of the Federal Communications Commission, whose personnel was selected by President Roosevelt just before his departure on vacation.

It is certain that rates of the telephone companies will receive particular scrutiny from this new commission. The legislation for the control of the communications industry seems to be based largely on the report of the Splawn committee, which took the telephone companies severely to task for their rate practices.

This committee maintained that the American public was entitled to receive full information regarding the nature of the services which the companies render, and the justice of the charges which are made. One of the first efforts of the new commission will be to study the operation of the telephone companies to determine if any economies can be effected, the benefits of which may be passed on to the consumer.

The study will be intensive and inclue such subjects as accounts, depreciation methods, operating expenses, service contracts, and, most certainly, the salaries of telephone company executives. These have already been brought out in prior statements by the Federal Trade Commission, to whom reports have been made.

Although the communications law makes no effort to infringe upon the authority of state commissions, there appears to be in prospect a long period of controversy between federal and state powers, comparable to that which took place in the field of transportation.

The communications commission designed, apparently, to take over the partial regulation by the Federal Radio Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Postmaster General. It seems reasonably probable that to these powers will be added in the course of time certain others.

'Nation' Group to Fight For Higher Gold Price

CHICAGO, July 21.—(AP.)—Short crops of farm commodities resulting from restriction of production and the drought may shortly force gold prices higher, the Committee for the Nation was told yesterday.

Prof. Frank A. Pearson, of Cornell University, associate of Prof. George F. Warren, monetary advisor to President Roosevelt in the recent dollar devaluation, warned "it was going to take a striking price rise to appease the farmers with the present short crops for the simple reason that they will have less to sell. It may be these short crops will call for a further rise in the price of gold beyond the present $35 an ounce."

James H. Rand, Jr., president of the Remington-Rand Corporation, chairman of the committee, which, he said, listed in its membership "over 2,500 pretty representative business men as well as farmers," was going to fight for an immediate further increase in the price of gold.

The major farm organizations appealed for an immediate raising of the gold price to the limit imposed by the Thomas amendment, $41.34 an ounce.

'GETTING RID' OF SURPLUS OLD PROBLEM

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, July 21.—A reader in Omaha, Neb., puts the following question to me:

"Over a period of years we have a surplus of manufacturing facilities of agricultural products, and of labor backed by great natural resources how are we to get rid of this surplus? It seems that the only outlet for our surplus is in other countries."

This is not a new question. It is one of the oldest problems of this depression, and of most other depressions. But it has not been solved, and it will not down.

We stall it off temporarily by another shot of government spending or inflation, which we foolishly call "creating purchasing power." Then we are again brought face to face with the facts and we find the surplus there.

My correspondent refers to "getting rid" of the surplus. So first I ask, why not destroy it?

But we can't destroy labor. It is difficult to destroy land. We don't want to destroy machinery or useful products. So it seems to me that our problem is to use our surplus—to find a useful application of stocks of goods and excess capacity. The problem is allow our plenty to afford a more abundant life.

USE DESIRABLE PRODUCTS

This we can do (a) by facilitating price readjustments, and (b) by restoring confidence.

We can allow prices to return to an adjustment which will encourage trade and let people buy more. This we can do by breaking up monopoly, and by stopping the practice of government loans to hold surplus stocks off the market. We can quit artificial schemes of price boosting.

We can restore confidence by returning to sound money and by taking the government (politics) out of business. It is most important the private lenders be given assurance that debts will be honestly paid.

In many cases, lower prices would enable people to buy more goods, and use them more abundantly or hold them for investment.

NEW USES FOR GOODS

2—We can develop new uses for goods and productive capacity. This would be encouraged by restoring confidence as suggested above. Reasonable certainty and stability, and reasonable freedom for individual initiative have always found the way.

3—We can develop foreign markets by encouraging world trade. To this end, the first thing to do would be to allow prices to become adjusted to the world level, so that international trade would be advantageous. It would also be necessary to break down many trade barriers in the shape of unreasonable tariffs and import quotas. Debts would have to be adjusted. Then the leading nations could return to the gold standard.

The United States would play a part in leading the way out of the narrow nationalism which is now strangling trade, and incidentally is depriving our farmers of markets.

The world has not scratched the surface of what can be accomplished by allowing each section to specialize in what it can produce most cheaply, and allowing each to trade with the other freely.

4—As to excess capacity, we should allow competition and the quest for profits to work, so as to eliminate the least efficient plants and farms.

We can win, but there is no way to beat the game.

OBITUARY

George H. Parmelee.

Services were held today for George H. Parmelee, retired partner in the law firm of Bakewell, Byrnes & Parmelee, predecessors to Byrnes, Stebbins & Blenko, of Pittsburgh. He died yesterday at his home in Guilford, Conn.

In 1905 Mr. Parmelee quit his post as head of the patent department of the Lorain Steel Company, Johnstown, to become associated with Thomas W. Bakewell and Clarence P. Byrnes, attorneys. He retired from active practice in 1920 and has since made his home in Guilford, or at Rockledge, Fla.

Mr. Parmelee leaves his wife, Mary E., and two sons, William H., a member of the law firm of Byrnes, Stebbins & Blenko, and Harry B. Parmelee.

ICKES LOWERS OIL QUOTA

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The national permissible crude oil production of 2,443,300 barrels daily in August, approved by Secretary Harold Ickes, today represented a decrease of 81,800 barrels from the quota of the previous month.

A large cut in the allowable gasoline production for August was announced and the crude oil production is believed to have been ordered to bring down stocks of this product. Also there were reports of a rapid accumulation of gasoline surplus in storage.

Pennsylvania was directed to reduce its quota 3,300 barrels to 40,700.

Youngstown Mill Schedules Expand

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 21.—(INS.)—Increase of five points to 35 per cent in steel production in the Youngstown district next week was predicted today on the strength of work resumption by several departments of plants in the area.

Idle since the beginning of July, the Bessemer plant of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company was to restart Monday on a one-third of capacity basis. Carnegie Steel Company, Ohio works, is to resume blast in one of its stacks and fire an open hearth while the Sharon Steel Hoop Company contemplates partial operation of four strip mills. Current schedules may be maintained by Republic Steel.

Labor Department Price Index Rises

WASHINGTON, July 20.—(AP.)—The Labor Department reports that wholesale commodity prices were higher in June than they had been since April, 1931.

The department's index for the month stood at 74.6, compared with 73.7 for May and 100 for the year 1926.

Memory Test

1—Babe Ruth went to the Boston Red Sox from the Baltimore Orioles in 1914.

3—Carl Hubbell, Guy Bush, Ben Cantwell and Dizzy Dean were the only National League pitchers to win 20 or more games last year.

4—Dizzy Dean led the National League in strikeouts for the 1933 season. His total was 199.

Cast Into Eden

By HENRY C. ROWLAND

CHAPTER II.

From the shore of which they could only see the lights there came a roaring sound, wind through the palms and other foliage. The black zone of water astern faded, then whitened. A flare of lightning showed its surface seething and tormented. Jerome had barely got in his oars and taken the tiller when the squall struck them.

The trim little craft was swept along with it in a lashing deluge of warm spray. Then down came the rain in a slanting torrent. The fishing boat was equipped for this sort of thing, half decked, with a weather cloth that Jerome had so devised it could be slid along gunters to cover most of the open part.

"Couldn't have made the shore of we'd wanted to," Jerome shouted. "This won't last long."

It lasted long enough to drive them out past the entrance flash and into open sea. The flarings and thunderings grew fainter. The torrential rain stopped as if somebody had closed off the valve. With a few fitful puffs of lessening violence the wind expired. The little boat wallowed about in a rapidly subsiding chop of waves. They found themselves becalmed under a multitude of bright stars what were like lanterns hung low in a purple velvet sky. Beyond them the pallid sheen of myriad celestial bodies too infinitely remote for any detailing merged into a pale luminosity. The water blazed with phosphorescent flashes.

"I rather like all that," Linda said.

LINDA AT TILLER

"A salt shower followed by a fresh one is tonic," Jerome agreed. He cleared the hood off the outboard engine, then started it. This was powered enough to drive the fishing skiff at twelve knots speed. Giving the tiller to Linda he pumped out the boat.

"Better take a nap," he advised.

"That ought not to be so long. You've got clear of the yacht and clear of the crowd. And in a few hours you'll be clear of me. All is swell."

Jerome was fighting to keep awake when the dawn rushed in and expanded into full day. Presently a slanting ray tickled Linda's eyelids so that she gave a sun sneeze and awoke. Directly ahead of them an island of the thousands from which the Mosquito Coast gets its name seemed to be pushed up as if to offer a rest station. It was a low island that looked fresh and verdant.

Jerome had swerved off his course to strike it. The elapsed time did not check with his estimated speed and distance, and it was an hour sooner than he expected to sight the island. A fair current no doubt. His compass was small but accurate and he knew the deviation caused by the engine when running due south. There was no iron in the boat's construction.

RECKONING QUEERED

He discovered then to his disgust that an iron gaff for lifting big fish into the boat had in some way been thrown almost against the compass under the furled sail.

"How did that gaff get there?" he asked. "It's put the compass all off."

Linda said indifferently, "The thing was under my shoulder and I shoved it out of my way. What of it?"

With the same maddening coolness she said, "I think it blew overboard in the squall. I saw something white flying away."

"Then we are stung."

"Not badly. You can see the mountains on the mainland."

"Yes, and we can see the sun on the horizon and get the depth of water. That would be enough for a local coast pilot but I don't happen to be one."

He wanted to take stock of what they had. They had swerved to the eastward to approach the island on its westward or sheltered side when the breeze sprang up. This put the sun directly in Linda's eyes and dazzled her. Also its reflection on the water and the bow wave prevented her discovering that the water had shoaled and that the bottom was studded with coral heads.

Jerome was on his hands and knees rummaging in the forward locker to get out the anchor and a coil of line, when there came a smashing, crunching contact and a flood of water almost in his face. The boat's way was checked for an instant. Then she slid over the ledge that was only a few inches beneath the surface and into the shore.

But Jerome saw instantly that she would never reach the shore. The jagged crest of coral had ripped away one of the cedar strakes beneath the water line and the brine was pouring in. He might have stuffed some clothing or a bight of the sail into the tear, but a part of it was under the flooring and there was no time to rip this up nor any tool with which to do so at hand.

The boat was filling fast. Jerome said grimly to Linda: "Now we have done it. Stand by to abandon ship."

She said bitterly: "The sun was in my eyes."

"Why didn't you say so?"

BOAT FILLS FAST

He stopped the engine, then quickly caught a turn of the anchor line round it and the other end to one of the kapok boat cushions to buoy the spot. Without the weight of the outboard engine the boat would float awash, having no ballast. He then unclamped the engine from the stern transom and let it go overboard in about a fathom and a half of water.

The little boat was filling fast. She was broad enough of beam to float on an even keel awash. Jerome got out his oars and started to pull in for the curve of white sandy beach. Before he had taken many strokes he was waist deep. Progress was very slow and it grew still slower as finally the boat filled awash.

Such articles aboard as could float were floating, but retained by two or three inches of gunwhale. Linda also was afloat. Jerome floundered over the side and found that he could stand in about four feet of water. Wading and swimming when the water deepened a little they managed to haul the boat along until she grounded on the beach.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Good work, fellows! We're proud of every one of those letters. There were a great many letters that were almost as good as the winners, and we look for a lot of fellows who didn't quite get a prize in last week's contest to have a swell chance in this week's new contest. Keep trying, fellows!

Looks like the new contest is more popular than last week's. What is the best outing you have had? Boy, that ought to be interesting! We are looking forward to reading some of the best letters ever.

For instance, what about that time you and your dad took a trip on that boat, all the way up the Great Lakes? And how about that time you all drove out in the car to a swell park up near Butler and played mushball and ate a swell chicken dinner your mother packed in the lunch basket?

Or perhaps you enjoyed your last Junior Patrol hike the best—the time when you toasted marshmallows over a fire and told stories about Indians and soldiers.

Whatever it was, let's hear about it in the best letter you know how to write.

Make your letter win one of the big prizes—$2.50, $1.50 and $1. No reason why you can't. Only Junior Patrol members are allowed to compete, so be sure you put your badge number on your letter somewhere. And we don't want the letters to be more than 100 words long. Send all letters to the Junior Patrol contest.

Philip's Rose

Daily Short Short-Story

By JEANNE MOWER

It was a July night. Moonlight flooded the garden. Wisteria bloomed in a riot over the arbor in which a man and a girl sat talking earnestly. Below them, the lights of Hollywood stretched like a long, glittering serpent toward the sea.

"Violet, I—I hardly know how to explain it all—just how it happened and everything!"

The girl shrugged wearily. "Now that its over, does it make any difference how it happened?"

The man clasped and unclasped his hands.

"How discerning you were, Phillip." Violet's tone was caustic, but her hands fluttered like hurt things in her lap.

"I've felt like a cad every time I've thought of you since I married Celeste. I suppose you think I'm a villain?"

The man's face took on a distressed, helpless look.

"Tell me, did you care—much—when you—heard?"

Violet looked surprised, then she smiled. "Well, of course it isn't any of your business, Phil, but I've never lied to you. Yes, I cared a lot . . ." Suddenly her reserve broke and she exclaimed piteously: "Oh, Phil, how could you? We had been such pals—such sweethearts."

Violet continued: "Of course I laughed it off. There were my fans to think of. They love me for my smiles—not my tears."

Phillip sat erect with a jerk. "There you go!" he exclaimed hotly. "Your work—your art—your film fans! You would think of your fans at such a time! That's the thing I've tried for months to explain to you . . . I tell you, a woman with a career, isn't a natural woman."

"And you don't think your wife will want a career Phillip?" Violet asked softly.

"By gad, I know she won't. It isn't in her blood to be anything other than a wife and mother."

"But she's been raised in the twentieth century, you know. Women today aren't like their mothers. As a mass they are demanding something more. They're still fundamentally wives and mothers, but they need something to occupy their minds—perhaps I should say their intellects."

Phillip shook his head.

"But, don't you realize, Phil, that where there's real love, and where a woman has her husband's interest at heart as well as her own, she can manage a career and her home and children, and all that?" There was a little helpless tone of pleading in her voice. "If we might have only tried. I'm sure I could have shown you——"

"It can't be done," Phillip said flatly. "Those things dont mix. Good God, Vi, do you think I'd ever have given you up if I hadn't been dead sure I was right?"

There was a short silence and then Violet asked: "Isn't that your wife on the veranda with Jim Burton? I've never met her, but I saw you together earlier in the evening."

"Yes, that's Celeste."

"I think she's looking for you."

"Phillip," she turned limpid, trusting eyes to his, "I'm so glad you've come." Her voice cooed. "Mr. Burton has just been telling me that he thinks I would make a wonderful success on the screen. He wants me to sign up for five years. I get my screen test tomorrow."

Phillip gaped. Then he laughed. "Well, thank God, Celeste, you aren't interested in a career." He took her arm and started toward the French windows.

"But, Phillip," Celeste refused to be dragged away—"you don't seem to realize what this means to me. I told Mr. Burton I'd start work next week."

"Phillip, I did." Celeste was not cooing now. Her eyes were no longer limpid, but held that peculiar steely look that only gray eyes can hold. "It's the chance of a lifetime. I've always been wild to get into pictures."

And then Violet stepped up. Phil introduced her to his wife. Violet said she thought congratulations were in order and Celeste interrupted her with:

"Double congratulations, please, for Mr. Burton has just asked me to sign a contract for five years."

"Well—how—how surprising," Violet managed to stammer, her eyes on Phillip. She lit a cigaret. She puffed once or twice, then said nonchalantly, to Phillip: "Well, of course, Phillip, I know you're delighted."

"Oh, yes—yes, indeed. Ah—" he fumbled desperately for words.

"Ah—women today—ah—aren't like their mothers. As a class, they're demanding something more." The words came with more assurance. "They need—ah—something to occupy their minds—perhaps I should say their intellects—."

"Bravo, Phillip!" someone shouted.

Some very green local burglars broke into the office of former Mayor Combs' Flour and Feed Store, Friday evening. They pried the lock off the back door to get in. Once inside they proceeded to ransack the drawers. They found the keys to the safe and unlocked and opened the big door. The inner door, however, they couldn't open. There is a knob upon it by which it is pulled open. The prowlers knocked this knob off, although they had the key to this door also. But they couldn't get it open, even though they had the key, which shows they would do well to drop burglary for some other business.

Q. and A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Sympathetic Aunt Bella—

My husband is an inveterate practical joker and when he gets a few drinks under his belt he does things that are simply awful. Why, just the other night he borrowed one of our guest's false teeth and dropped them into the soup of another guest, creating a very embarrassing situation. I mean it was really a faux pas. What shall I do?

—Distraught.

Ans.—Well, well, your old man sounds like quite a card. But Auntie B. is afraid she will not be able to advise unless you explain the situation more fully. What was the trouble, hadn't he been introduced to the guest in whose soup he dropped the teeth?

The Letter of the Law

Are we at the mercy of unforeseen events, political upheavals and international tremors? Or does an all-wise Congress provide enough bird seed for the canary and milk for the cat?

Well, it seems the legislators do that very thing. They bill and law us all winter and want us to feel that they are still with us in the summer time.

First, while this Congress is absent, no Republican is allowed to crash Capitol Hill. Some fiendish tourists might get together and vote for a lot of new things. The President wouldn't be able to veto them because he wouldn't know about it.

Second, Congress can just about see what is going to happen in summer. So they get together in June and pass laws to stop it.

It doesn't make any difference what it is. Maybe recovery, a boom or a slight reaction. Laws are always passed to stop something.

Until we step out of order we don't know what those laws are. That's why mail order houses are run on better business lines. When a mail order house has any novelties it sends you a catalog.

You read the catalog and order by number. When the good housewife sees the blue eagle in a grocery store she says, "I'll take a dozen eggs, but I don't want them blue." There is nothing else to remind her of anything she may need.

Normally, America is placid and orderly. We are a law-biting nation. But sometimes we are deluged with a plethora of constitutional detours that annoy. Stretching out the things that are legal and the items which are not, we find that the side-tracks are far longer than the main line. Therefore, most of our expenses are for demurrage and evaporation in transit.

This may not make sense to you. Don't forget that The Bug has joined the cerebral corporation and is busy solving the problems of the world. Like all the experts, he has a terrific campus brain, and in the process of thought has burned many a hole in a paper hat.

So, if you have any financial problems just write to The Bug. Enclose a three-cent stamp for your answer. The Bug is starting an art gallery of small Whistler's mothers.

In the meantime, do the best you can until Congress meets again. We may be there as an authorized deputy from the outlying countries, which are always to be heard from but never are.

Outrageous Discrimination

The Federal Government Treats Pennsylvania Unfairly—Comment on Local News

Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes thought, according to a Washington dispatch, that Mayor W. N. McNair was a Republican, since he came from Pittsburgh, and that was the reason why Mr. Ickes refused to see Mr. McNair when the latter called on him Thursday. On learning that the Mayor is a Democrat, Mr. Ickes was profusely regretful. He would gladly have granted a private interview if he had known Mr. McNair's status.

In this illuminating disclosure lies the reason, we suspect, for the fact that Pennsylvania has been persistently snubbed by the Washington administration in relief and public works grants. The state, according to this theory, is having to pay the penalty for having gone Republican in the last Presidential election. Mr. Ickes either did not know, or has forgotten, that Allegheny County and many other normally Republican counties went Democratic.

*Bear in mind that Pennsylvania, a highly indus*trialized state, was one of the hardest hit, one with the greatest need for public works to give employment to its hundreds of thousands of jobless citizens. Then consider how we fared in the Public Works Administration and Civil Works Administration allotments. The figures will be found in an interesting report that has just been issued by State Treasurer Charles A. Waters.

Mr. Waters says that Pennsylvania received for the calendar year 1933 in PWA allotments $1.08 for each tax dollar paid to the federal government, whereas 10 other states whose combined population does not equal that of Pennsylvania received an average of $21.67, individual states receiving from $12.95 to $42.67. The CWA gave Pennsylvania 31 cents for each tax dollar, as compared with returns to other states running from $6 to $9.25.

Scandalous as was the shabby treatment received by Pennsylvania in the allocation of the funds for public works, the discrimination from which we are suffering in the allotment of federal relief funds is even more outrageous. As things stand now, it seems that unless the Legislature is called into special session and new taxes levied, we will be cut off from the federal relief list after next month. The threat has been issued as an ultimatum.

The injustice of Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins' demand may be seen when we inquire how the other states have been treated. Here, again, we are indebted to State Treasurer Waters for the figures. He says that for the year 1933, out of a total of $111,969,959 furnished by all state governments for relief, Pennsylvania's state government alone contributed $48,997,377.

Twelve of the 48 states, Mr. Waters informs us, contributed nothing at all to their relief needs last year, but depended entirely upon the federal government. Thirty-three states had a larger percentage of their relief load carried by federal funds than did Pennsylvania in 1933, and during the first quarter of this year 36 states fared better in this respect at the hands of the Federal Relief Administration than we did.

Ninteen states and the District of Columbia failed to contribute a dollar from their treasuries for relief purposes during the first three months of this year, while Pennsylvania provided 60.6 per cent of its relief requirements. For every tax dollar paid the federal government, Pennsylvania received 42 cents in relief, while other states show $10, $12 and $18.38. How can Washington defend such discrimination?

In the circumstances there is strong justification for Mr. Waters' suggestion that the Federal Government be notified that Pennsylvania does not propose to place new tax burdens on its people by September, through a special session of the Legislature, but will meet the problem at the regular session in January. In the meantime Pennsylvania's Democratic leaders—Joseph F. Guffey, David L. Lawrence and George H. Earle—should intercede at Washington.

An especially pitiful feature of the relief situation is revealed in a Community Fund announcement that owing to lack of money hundreds of children who have heretofore been given short camping trips by social service agencies will not get them this year. The children who are to suffer are residents of congested districts in the South Side, Woods Run, North Side and Rankin, the very ones that are most in need of a few days in the country. What an opportunity for a rich philanthropist!

The way may not be clear to give Pittsburgh's under-privileged youngsters a little relief from the discomfort and ugliness of a summer in the slums; but there is one other important thing that can be done to protect Pittsburgh's children, and that is to put a ban on fireworks. The Western Pennsylvania Safety Council reports that in the last five years five tots under eight years of age lost their lives, others were blinded, and about 600 children were so seriously injured in local fireworks accidents that they required hospital treatment.

*The Safety Council, the Board of Public Educa*tion and other bodies have asked Council to pass an ordinance which will prohibit the use of fireworks. Council should grant this request in the interest of public safety, and should act at once, that the fireworks dealers, the principal opponents of the measure, may not be able to plead that they have stocked up in preparation for the Fourth of July.

Prof. Rene Thevenin, the distinguished French scientist, believes that even if man had never discovered fire civilization and progress would still have been made, although along entirely different lines. He develops this curious thesis in an interesting article in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

Rosie's beau would like to make her jealous, and accordingly arranges at a greater cost than he can afford to take another girl to the school dance. But the best laid plans of mice and men aft gang agley, as Bobbie Burns said, and so it is in this case. The story is humorously pictured by George McManus in Puck, the Comic Weekly section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 21.—To the ladies! It's long past time to swirl a gallant cape for their good sportsmanship during the depression. Most men I know spend their time talking about the yachts, stocks and bonds they used to own. While the ladies are out in the kitchen, sleeves rolled up, laughing it off.

No opiate is so deadening as memory, fogging reality with useless dreams. Women have shaken off the jitters long ago, plunged in to buck up their men, still the whimpering. The history of this economic upset will show it has not been mastered by codes and cabals, but by feminine courage.

In a word, the ladies have been magnificent. When the back-trek began from grilled mansions and pent-houses the men could be found brooding over the club highball in the despair of anxious thought. The world was finished. Everything was sixes and sevens. Nothing could be done!

All the while the women were cozying up some walk-up flat into a suburban arcadia, starting the men off mornings with encouraging pats and receiving the discouraging moans in the evening with uplifting cheer. They refused to resign themselves to mutual passiveness.

* * *

Not all credit goes to the happily married. Single ladies and forlorn widows have displayed amazing pluck. A young widow I know has gone sliding down the social scale from a Fifth avenue duplex to a Second avenue hall room. She is cashier now in a milk depot—$12 a week, gives a dollar a week to charity and has never chucked her smile. That sort of courage takes Spartan spunk.

* * *

There's a telephone lady, too. A widow with three youngsters, one an infantile paralysis victim. She makes $95 a month, mostly night work. How she has, head-up, kept her little brood together during tautness of the world's most desperate strain is an achievement wrenching the heart. For five years ago she rode the crest—a beach home at Rye, an apartment in town, a trust fund, now worthless, that furnished $12,500 a year.

* * *

In the linen room of a smart Park avenue hotel is a white-haired lady of enormous serenity and charm. Seven years ago her daughter made her debut in the hotel's dining room. The lady herself has occupied a six-room suite there. The crash, a husband in a sanitarium, an indifferent daughter, and there she is, beached on the tragic shoals. She works eight hours a day checking linen and three nights a week is hostess at a slum mission. If she isn't happy, she is one of the world's greatest actresses.

* * *

There is an old philosophy that deep sorrows are dumb. Yet the most exquisite and articulate comment about the crack-up of millions of hopes has come from women who suddenly through no fault of their own suffered the bitterest and most continuous defeats. Not from them are hurled the destructive threats of the soap boxes. Or the calamitous prophecies of idlers taking advantage of a situation to collect without effort. Every lady I know, frosted in the slight, is hopeful of the future. They are taking it on the chin. Pollyanas perhaps. But not in the history of any living person has humanity so needed the Pollyana mood. After all the world was not brought to desolation by the Pollyanas and the Babbitts but by the merciless blusterers who often laughed and sneered at them.

* * *

The triumphs of feminine forbearance thread every highlight of history, floating for an instant in the public eye like a smoke ring and sifting apart. Soon forgotten. In the blackest hours of life, you and I and every man turn instinctively to woman—wife, mother, sister or sweetheart. And invariably find solace and sound advice.

* * *

Cecil Rhodes once declared every great scheme of empire building had its genesis in the encouragement and supreme optimism of some moden woman whom the world never heard or saw. And so it will be when the horrow of these past four years have vanished beyond Time's horizon. The woman who sustained man, brushed him off, adjusted his tie when he fell and conditioned him to win the battle will never be known. They will be entirely too busy anyway getting ready for the next crop of grumbling bunglers.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Prune Out the Suckers!

The little oak tree has grown eight inches. Perhaps you think that isn't a Vital Statistic for YOU. But stick around!

Last year the little oak was only a tangle of thin twigs. Beneath the surface, deep in the rich, black loam, its roots had worked furiously for five years, seeking out nourishment, shooting it up the main trunk. From all that industry there should have come a fine sapling, strong and straight. Instead, there was that litter of weak branches, sprawling aimlessly in every direction.

One day I took pruning shears and saw and went to work. When I was through, one shoot was left—a sickly affair. But now that shoot has rounded and toughened into a husky trunk, which seems actually to leap into the air with each warming sunrise. Presently there will be a tall, bronze shaft, a cavern of cool shade outside my studio window, where there had been only a weedy mat.

An amazing result for 10 minutes' work—yet the most simple miracle. By pruning off the suckers, I let the strong root system throw all its energy into one branch. Before, it had spread in a score of directions, accomplished nothing. Now a splendid tree was under way.

If one could only prune lives as one does trees . . . cut off the suckers . . . concentrate the energy of mind and soul!

How many characters you've seen spreading out in just such weak and aimless growth! Beneath the surface, there are the makings of a great nature. Keen mind, kind heart, gathering healthy nourishment from life, pouring that nourishment out in a desire for expression, and then scattering, getting nowhere.

Getting nowhere for exactly the same reason the little oak got nowhere. TOO MANY SUCKERS.

Too many interests. Too many diversions—demands on time and energy. Never has human existence been so filled with "suckers" that sap one's strength, scatter one's purpose, as in this chaotic century.

So many places to go . . . so many things to do . . . so many people to do them with. Telephones ringing all day. Friends popping in and out. This new fad. That new crusade.

Alluring adventures, all of them. Important, most pressing, many of them.

BUT WHAT BECOMES OF A LIFE THAT TRIES TO SPREAD OUT IN TOO MANY DIRECTIONS? WHAT DOES IT ACCOMPLISH? HOW FAR DOES IT GET?

So what?

IF YOU WANT TO DO ANYTHING WITH YOUR LIFE IN THIS 20TH CENTURY—YOU'LL HAVE TO PRUNE . . . RUTHLESSLY . . . CEASELESSLY.

It won't be easy. To the contrary, it will be extremely tough, and make you exceedingly unpopular. You'll have to give up dozens of delightful diversions.

If you're a woman, you'll have to cut out the morning phone visits with Dorothy and Mabel . . . the afternoons of gay gabbing and gadding with Inez, Hortense and Clarice . . . the ga-ga evenings over silly magazines and bridge.

If you're a man, you'll have to swear off the "conferences" with Bill and Jo . . . the two-hour lunches with Ed and Harry . . . the dice sessions . . . the after-dinner bumming in the corner smoke shop or drug store.

All of which will make a lot of other lovable loafers extremely sore and snooty. But harder even to stand than their snorts and sniffs will be your own laziness—your mental lalli-gagging.

For years you've been promising yourself that you'd Do Something Worth While—and for years you've been blaming everyone else for keeping you from it. But the simple truth is, you've been letting yourself yield to any vagrant impluse or invitation, until now it is almost impossible for you to concentrate on anything.

THAT'S WHY YOU CAN'T. You've got the makings—but you're spreading them out in too many directions. If you want to GET somewhere, BE something . . . PRUNE . . . PRUNE . . . PRUNE.

GOING THROUGH STAGE

By Winifred Black

She says so herself, and somehow when seven-year-old looks at you with those soft brown eyes and makes a statement in a matter of fact voice and manner, you believe she knows what she is talking about.

Seven-year-old and her mother were at the week-end resort and, as often happens when a pretty child is at an hotel, the other guests began to spoil and pet her too much.

After dinner, as they were taking a little walk, with arms twined around each other, mother spoke to her daughter about her behavior at dinner, and added, "do you know, my dear, mother felt a little bit ashamed of you tonight for the first time in your life—what in the world happened to make you behave so?"

"Oh, you don't need to be worried about that, mother—don't you know that all children have to go through these stages?"

But I don't believe mother has much to worry about, do you?

If seven-year-old can go through life analyzing every phase and not taking it too seriously, it seems to me that there is great contentment and deep enjoyment ahead of her.

I once knew a little girl about her age who was given too much to introspection and to taking little things seriously.

She was at a child's party in a small town and when the cookies were passed around, this poor little shy girl managed to drop one of the cookies off the plate, and, oh, the world just stopped moving around for her—for days and days.

She went home and told her mother about it and brooded over it for a long time.

Now, if I had been the mother of that little girl, I think I should have worried.

But with seven-year-old—never. Taking life as it comes—with its illusions and disillusions—it happiness and its tears—it's all just a phase"—its surprises and disappointments.

Here's looking at you, seven-year-old—keep that calm, matter-of-fact attitude toward whatever experience life has to offer, and I'm willing to bet you come through fairly unscathed.

What do you think about it?

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Changed financial conditions the past few years have made it difficult for the "gold-digger" sort of girls to meet with success.

Fewer young men have money to spend and others have become familiar at last with the kind of girl who uses many devices to cause their escorts to spend extravagently in their entertainment.

"The leg-pulling game" became a great racket with a certain class of girls, and it was a surprise to note the sort of girls who resorted to that system.

It was also surprising to find how many young men were susceptible to that game.

The only interest the girls had in these fellows was the extent of the entertainment they provided.

Even the most liberal were dropped from the list when it became impossible for them to spend in an extravagant manner.

Dads, who were loaded to the breaking point with expense, were called upon to provide extra money for their sons to spend foolishly.

This racket is not very profitable any more.

ISN'T IT SO?

The world has not yet learned the riches of frugality.

Purchase the next world with this; you will win both.

The older you are the quicker the future becomes the past.

When good fellows get together, the wives wait up until daylight.

There is no man so bad but he has a secret respect for one that's good.

Human Side of the News

Donald Richberg, a Tennessean of Old Vermont Ancestry, Is Given an Important Job by President Roosevelt

By Edwin C. Hill

THE opposition press calls him "Roosevelt's Regent" and "the Acting President." Capital looks askance at him because of his record as a lawyer for the railroad unions. The extreme left-wingers don't like him because "he talks like Emma Goldman and acts like Kuhn, Loeb & Co." But he laughs it all off, does Donald R. Richberg, and continues to sing chanteys and write whimsical verse for his 8-year-old daughter.

Like Felix Frankfurter and Joseph Kennedy, he's another of "the Harvard gang" which supplements the Brain Trust in the present administration. A large man, with a bald pate, fringed with black-gray hair, Mr. Richberg comes from old New England stock, from the Randall and the Briggs families of Revolutionary War days in Vermont.

* * *

Came Suddenly Into Limelight

HE IS a native of Tennessee, a graduate of Harvard Law, a Republican lawyer of Chicago and a partner there of Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior. He had cut no national figure until Hugh Johnson brought him to Washington as general counsel of the National Recovery Administration. The country has since heard from him often and pointedly, for like Johnson he seems to be ever on the go., airplaning up and down the land and talking straight from the shoulder about the New Deal and why we must all swallow it, whether we like it or not.

When the President packed up to sail the seven seas, he left many things undone. He left, too, a half-a-hundred of those emergency bureaus which are overlapping and intertwining. Somebody had to unravel the knots, and that somebody turns out to be Donald Richberg.

Mr. Roosevelt called him in and said something like this:

"Donald, school is out for me, but it is just beginning for you. Get Gen. Johnson to give you a couple of months off from the NRA, and then you step in and co-ordinate all this stuff. I'll be back in September, and then you can have ready for me a complete program for use after the emergency legislation has expired."

* * *

Richberg Outlines His Program

SUCH is the job of the new Industrial Emergency Committee of which Richberg is the director and which includes four or five other members, including Secretaries Ickes and Perkins. It is a matter of ironing out all the present snarls and then drawing up plans for the future.

What is Richberg going to do about it? Well, he doesn't know exactly as yet, but broadly he puts it in these words:

"We must decide on the extent of government intervention and its allocation to different activities. We must advance our plans for public work toward more permanent stabilization on industrial conditions. Into the program of industrial self-government must be written public supervision and participation to prevent abuses of economic power without assuming political power."

In other words, he sees his task as that of salvaging all that is possible of the New Deal and writing it into the law of the land for the future. His work is certainly cut out for him, but no matter what it brings, one thing is sure, Donald Richberg can take it with a smile.

How Coolidge Handled The Police Strike

By James T. Williams, Jr.

SAN FRANCISCO'S general strike will recall to the mind of the public how a governor of Massachusetts—Calvin Coolidge—saved the people of Boston from such a disaster 15 years ago.

These in brief are the circumstances:

In the latter part of July, 1919, the police commissioner of the city of Boston, Edwin U. Curtis, served notice that members of the Boston police force could not join a labor union and remain policemen because a policeman could not perform his sworn duty without remaining free from outside affiliations that might interfere.

This was the attitude taken by the preceding police commissioner, but both the order and the warnings of Commissioner Curtis were defied and the Boston police union was set up several weeks later.

Nineteen policemen who joined the union were tried by the commissioner for violating his order forbidding members of the force to join a union. On September 9 they were suspended after they had been given a hearing. Following their suspension the policemen's union held a meeting and voted to strike.

In the afternoon of September 9 the strike went into effect—three-quarters of the police force of the city of Boston left the police department in a body. They abandoned their posts of duty.

Around midnight, rioting started. Many shop windows were broken and large quantities of goods on display were seized and taken away by the rioters.

* * *

Coolidge Gave Credit to Curtis

THE metropolitan police of more than 100, and 30 or 40 members of the state police force were still on duty, but their numbers were insufficient to protect the city from the disorderly.

Next morning the Mayor of Boston called out the State Guard—a force which had been organized when the National Guard was federalized and went to war.

Upon being informed that the Mayor by putting a State Guard officer in command had virtually displaced the commissioner, Gov. Coolidge called out the remainder of the State Guard, assumed command and issued a general order restoring Mr. Curtis to his place as commissioner in charge of the Boston police.

He also issued a proclamation calling upon all citizens to assist in preserving order and directing all police officers in Boston to obey the orders of Mr. Curtis.

Mr. Coolidge always insisted that the credit should go to Mr. Curtis "for raising the issue and enforcing the principle that police should not affiliate with any outside body, whether of wage-earners or of wage-payers, but should remain unattached, impartial officers of the law, with sole allegiance to the public."

But Mr. Coolidge gave his full support as Governor to the position taken by Mr. Curtis and that support was reinforced by an overwhelming public sentiment.

Then came the threat of a general strike to tie up the city of Boston. In the meantime, Gov. Coolidge was called upon by Samuel Gompers to remove Mr. Curtis as police commissioner and reinstate the striking policemen. He declined to do either one or these things, declaring in his telegram of reply to Mr. Gompers that there is no right to strike against the public safety by any body, any time, anywhere.

Anticipated Need Of Federal Troops

AND in order that he might be prepared to deal with any emergency created by the general strike, Gov. Coolidge telegraphed the Secretary of War that the seriousness of the situation might make it necessary for the commonwealth of Massachusetts to call upon the federal government for the assistance of federal troops to protect the public welfare by maintaining law and order.

Publication in Boston of that message and the public sentiment which it evoked ended all future danger of a strike and sealed the doom of the Boston police strike.

In the ensuing election, Mr. Coolidge was overwhelmingly reelected Governor on the issues involved in the Boston police strike and the threat of the general strike. And among the first to congratulate him was President Wilson, then ill in the White House, who sent this message:

"I congratulate you upon your election as a victory of law and order. When that is the issue, all Americans stand together."

Writing about the stand he took in the Boston police strike and the support which the people gave him, Mr. Coolidge said after he left the White House:

"My faith that the people would respond to the truth was justified. The requirements of the situation as it developed seem clear and plain now, and easy to decide, but as they arose they were very complicated and involved in many immaterial issues. The right thing to do never requires any subterfuges, it is always simple and direct. That is the reason that intrigue usually falls of its own weight."

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Hint

I look above
As I sit here
With many walls
Around me, near

With walls of room
And house and towers
That keep me sunless
All my hours.

My window shows
One corner there
As blue as heaven,
As heaven, fair.

And so I know
The wind-swept space
That lies beyond
My prison place.
